LONDON, Aug. 13.—(UP)—Europe's nerves were taut tonight in its worst attack of "war scare" since angry armies faced each other across the German-French frontier three months ago, governments of the big powers urged their people that the day "the next great war" still is distant.

Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's massing 1,000,000 or more troops for the continent's biggest war maneuver since the World War, beginning Monday, was the chief cause of alarm.

Aggravating the tension caused Germany's admittedly "unusual" war game was a sudden resurgence of Italo-French animosity.

This led to surprise decision of the French government to reject drastically visits to Italy by Frenchmen, reinforce counter-espionage activities and bulwark frontier guards.

British Restrictions.
Great Britain likewise put caps on travel across the English Channel to Nazi Germany, by publishing details of an order forbidding British army men to travel to forbidden German military bases.

Civilians, storing up gas masks and burdened by steadily increasing tax loads to pay for the biggest arms race in history, read ominously-ominous accounts in their newspapers indicating that the explosion bringing Europe's powers to each other's throats might not be far off.

For several weeks rumors had read, through Europe and around the world, that today would be "Der Tag" for another of Hitler's Saturday surprises.

Some of these rumors, for which the real basis of fact could be found, contended that Der Fuehrer was ready to invade Czechoslovakia and at last impose by military might his professed "protective interest" over the Sudeten German minority of 3,500,000.

Hitler Announcements.
Official assurances that there is no cause for alarm, at least for the time being, and a series of announcements in Berlin proclaiming Hitler's peaceful intentions appeared tonight to have had some effect in soothing the fears of millions.

The day passed without incidents of any kind along Germany's border with Czechoslovakia or France's border with Italy. But for six weeks, until late September when the German war maneuvers end, tension will persist because it is admitted, even in Germany, that Hitler and the Reich's high command have not overlooked the fact that 1,000,000 men at arms will be a highly important psychological factor in impressing the Czechoslovak government with the necessity of satisfying the autonomy demands.

3 SUSPECTS HELD IN SAFE MURDER

Negroes Are Held in Death Probe of Coal Company Night Guard.

Three negro employees of the Campbell Coal Company were arrested last night in connection with the brutal slaying of a night watchman at the coal yards, killed in an attempted safe robbery.

The battered body of the watchman, J. P. Simpson, 64, of 711 Jett street, N. W., was found in a small stable in the rear of the company's offices at 306 Foundry street, N. W.

Detectives M. B. Johnson and D. L. Taylor said the arrested negroes were charged with suspicion of murder. The suspects were listed as Albert Stephens, 22, of a Cain street address; John Moss, 26, of a Haynes street address, and Willie Walker, 32, of 131 Elm street.

The detectives did not reveal why the suspects were taken into custody. The men are being held incommunicado at police headquarters. All are long-time employees.

However, John P. Frey Tells House Investigating Committee That Lewis and Majority of Followers Are Opposed to Communism.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—(AP)—John P. Frey, of the American Federation of Labor, charged today that John L. Lewis' rival labor organization was honeycombed with members of the Communist party, whose purpose he said was revolution.

"Training Camp." The sit-down strike and mass picketing have been used by the Communists in our country," he said, "as a training camp in which Communists can become familiar with the tactics they are to apply when their revolutionary program is put into action.

"The sit-down strike and mass picketing have been used as front-line trenches in which the mass revolutionists of the future are to receive experience and training to equip them for the day when the signal for revolution is given."

Frey was particularly outspoken regarding the Transport Workers' Union, which he said was "headed by four leading members of the Communist party who are working under orders of Moscow to Sovietize the American transit industry."

For 20 years, he said, the American Federation of Labor had held Communistic influences in check.

SOUTH'S LEADERS COMMENT ON ILLS AFTER NEC STUDY

Too Damn Much Politics', Adverse Freight Rates and Reciprocal Tariff Policy Assailed.

COUNCIL'S REPORT CALLED CHALLENGE

Banker Decries 'Wrong People' Getting Cash Turned Loose by U. S.

By the Associated Press.

Freight rate differentials, the nation's reciprocal tariff policy, and "too damn much politics" were comments made most frequently yesterday by southern leaders referring to the report of the National Emergency Council as to what ails the south.

Many saw in the council's report a challenge to the southland's ability to solve its economic and social problems.

"I don't think there's a thing wrong with the south except to damn much politics," was the diagnosis of President Edward C. Romph, of the First National Bank at Miami, Fla.

"If you stand behind a teller's cage in this bank," he said, "you get the heaves watching the wrong people get the money the government's handing out."

Rail Rates Decreed.

Adverse freight rates were named by Edgar Watkins, of Atlanta, attorney for the Southeastern Governors' Conference and former examiner for the Interstate Commerce Commission, as one of the south's "greatest handicaps" along with "our low farm income."

The Memphis (Tenn.) Press Sciimitar (Scripps-Howard) stated editorially that the "nation" first should "get off its (the south's) back" and lend "a helping hand." "So helped," the editorial concluded, "the south can be trusted to help itself."

Congressman Robert Ramspeck, Democrat, Georgia, was "glad to see the south's main troubles in the open" where "we can see what's to be done."

Little could be done, however, until favorable freight rates were established in the south, he said.

Welfare Commissioner George H. Cate, of Tennessee, believed the "problem will be solved in the development of the natural and human resources of this largest section of the nation."

Supporters of the senior senator in DeKalb county announced a meeting at the Decatur courthouse for 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night when they will lay plans for a gigantic George rally to be held at the Decatur courthouse on August 25.

Hotel Addresses.

Meanwhile Wiley Moore, president of the Fulton County George Club, announced that beginning Saturday night, Senator George would address public meetings at the Henry Grady hotel. These meetings would be held in a ballroom, Moore announced, but he added that amplifiers would carry the speech to the lobby and the street to care for overflow crowds.

A meeting of the Camp board of strategy to lay plans to follow up any advantages gained by the Barnesville speech is planned for today.

The governorship race apparently was relegated to a secondary position as it became more and more certain that Governor Rivers would adhere to his previously-announced plan to keep hands off the senate race.

OUT-OF-STATE AID FOR SOLON CHARGED

Lawmaker's Backers Issue Call for Financial Assistance in Campaign.

As the Georgia senatorial race became the major national political battle of the year, the forces united behind Senator George moved yesterday to present his independent views to the people of the state while District Attorney Lawrence Camp, the President's choice for George's seat, struck out at the senior senator in a speech in which he charged that support of George "by Liberty Leaguers and the Republican party" forced President Roosevelt to intervene in the campaign.

Speaking at Waycross, where Senator George will address a gathering tomorrow, Camp defended the President's right to enter into the campaign, asserting that the chief executive had done so only after out-of-state anti-New Dealers and Republicans had rallied to the senior senator's support.

Holds Conferences.

Meanwhile, Senator George held a series of conferences in Atlanta and spent most of the day preparing the address he is to deliver tomorrow where he will make his first public appearance following the Barnesville speech last Thursday in which President Roosevelt called for his defeat.

George campaign headquarters took on evidence of additional activity during the day. Price Gilbert, treasurer of the campaign fund, issued a call for financial assistance, informing George leaders over the state that the need for funds is "desperate."

Supporters of the senior senator in DeKalb county announced a meeting at the Decatur courthouse for 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night when they will lay plans for a gigantic George rally to be held at the Decatur courthouse on August 25.

ALL-TIME RECORD SET BY TOBACCO

Nearly $18,000,000 Paid
Growers Within First 12 Days of 1938 Season.

VALDOSTA, Ga., Aug. 13.—(AP)—

South Georgia's bright leaf tobacco markets boomed to an all-time sales record, with nearly $18,000,000 paid to growers in the first 12 days of the 1938 auction season, an unofficial tabulation indicated today.

With several days of the auction season to go, this figure surpassed the total of $15,570,510 paid during the entire season of 1937, and apparently exceeded the all-time record high of 1936, when buyers paid $17,670,567.60 for the crop.

The total was the highest for any other previous season since the auctions began in 1919, including the 1929 record of $16,768,000, which stood as tops until 1936.

Most of the approximately 20 "tents" which surround the Old Salem arbors are already filled, but the crowds continued to pour in.

At least 5,000 persons are expected for the opening service at 11 o'clock tomorrow, when all denominations will join in paying tribute to Bishop Warren A. Candler, who began preaching here as a boy.

There was much hand-shaking and exchanging of greetings this afternoon as the early arrivals met old friends and made new ones.

They immediately began to put their cabins in order in preparation for the week's sojourn.

Behind the "tents," negro mambies were busy. They carried wood, strung beans, and made ready for the big Sunday dinner, for the people who come to camp meetings believe in having plenty of food. There were coops of

Crowds Seek 'Old Religion' At Camp Meet

110th Annual Salem Sessions on Historic Grounds Opens.

By LUKE GREENE,
Constitution Staff Writer.

SALEM CAMP GROUNDS, Ga.,
Aug. 13.—Hundreds of men, women and children in quest of the old-time religion began to trickle into this historic Newton county camp ground this afternoon for the opening of the 110th annual camp meeting tomorrow.

From the pine-crested mountains of Georgia to the Golden Isles they came. Some of them rode in long, shiny limousines. Some of them rattled along in rickety, out-moded automobiles. Some of them crowded into trucks, while there was an occasional horse-drawn buggy or "hack."

Most of the approximately 20 "tents" which surround the Old Salem arbors are already filled, but the crowds continued to pour in.

LABOR ACT AFFECTS 4,000,000 WORKERS

Hours To Be Shortened for About 1,750,000 More Than Expected.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—(AP)—Labor Department officials estimated today that as many as 4,000,000 workers—about 1,750,000 more than congress counted on—might obtain shorter working hours ultimately under the new wage-hour law.

Estimates as to the maximum number who would receive wage increases by the time the law's provision for a general 40-cent-an-hour minimum takes effect in 1945—remained unchanged at upwards of 1,000,000.

Officials said the upward revision of the number to receive shorter hours resulted largely from two factors:

1. A narrowing of the interpretation of "seasonal" industries which are exempt from the law's regulation of hours.

2. Indications that many employers, in so-called "twilight zone" of uncertainty as to whether they were subject to the law, would comply with its provisions rather than risk the penalties of violation, which include fines of double the difference between the wages paid and the amount required by the act.

The act, which becomes effective October 24, requires generally that industries in or affecting interstate commerce must pay not less than 25 cents an hour and work their employees not more than 44 hours a week. The general wage minimum will increase automatically to 30 cents at the end of the first year and to 40 cents at the end of seven years. The work-week will decrease to 42 hours after the first year and to 40 hours after two years. However, minimum wages higher than 25 cents an hour but not more than 40 cents may be fixed immediately, in a given industry, upon recommendation of a committee appointed to study that industry.

Many inquiries are coming into the department concerning the application of the new law.

The band will be a feature of this year's encampment at old Salem Camp Grounds. The organization will play through Wednesday's services. Hundreds of chickens, baskets of sweet potatoes, whole hams and scores of watermelons. These were just a few of the edibles that brightened the kitchens and supply rooms of the cabins.

The odor of fresh, clean straw filled the air, for the cabins, arbor and hotel are a foot thick in it. It's just a part of the camp-meeting atmosphere.

W. H. Ogletree, 72, of Covington, was among the early arrivals. He has been coming to Salem camp meetings for 67 years. Things have changed a lot since he made his first visit at the tender age of five years, but the general spirit of the meetings is still there, he says.

He recalled that the old-timers brought their cows and pigs to camp meeting with them, but, of course, that practice has long since discontinued. In the old days the people used to "get happy" and shout more than they do now," he added.

Mr. Ogletree remembers the time when prayer meetings around the arbor and on the grounds lasted until 2 o'clock in the morning. They still have some great services, he said, and there is still plenty of evidence that the old religious fervor is still alive.

Modern Conveniences.

Many modern conveniences have been added to the camp ground. The occupants of the "tents" and hotels have electric lights as well as running water. They still have some great services, he said, and there is still plenty of evidence that the old religious fervor is still alive.

Atlanta Evangelist.

The Rev. William Boring, pastor of the Wesley Memorial Methodist church in Atlanta, will be evangelist. Major John Bouters, Salvation Army revivalist, is also on the staff. Adjutant Frank Longline, of Louisville, Ky., will be director of music; Mrs. Ernest Holz, camp hostess, and Captain Eunice Ward, in charge of young people's work and vocal soloists.

Among the members of the board of trustees arriving early was Major R. J. Quinn, of Atlanta, who predicted a great meeting.

The first camp meeting at Salem was held in 1828. The present stand was built in 1854. The camp meeting has always been well attended by Christians of various denominations, especially Presbyterians and Missionary Baptists.

Many of the outstanding preachers of the Methodist church have preached at Salem, among them being Dr. Alexander Means, Bishop James D. Andrew, George F. Pierce, Atticus G. Haggard, Dr. Lovett Pierce, and many others of more modern times, including Bishop James E. Dickey and Bishop Candler.

"Uncle Abe" doesn't know how many preachers he has waited on, but during his 38 years he has attended to as many as 14 and 15 at a time.

"There ain't no tellin' how many I've waited on," he said, as he removed his hat, and began to fan.

"I always look forward to these big meetings every year."

100-Year-Old Cabin.

Mrs. C. D. Ramsey Sr., of Covington, stood in the back door of her "tent" and gave directions to two negro servants who were preparing Sunday dinner. She has been coming told Old Salem for 60 years and lives in the oldest cabin on the grounds. It is nearly 100 years old.

The meeting this year is under the direction of the Salvation Army. It will continue throughout the week, with an early morning fellowship service at 7 o'clock in the morning, life and power service at 11 o'clock, song and testi-

I. C. C. Highway Carrier Survey May Show Need for U. S. Control

Higher Degree of Safety Sought in Operation of Trucks When Officials Begin Investigation, Findings To Go to Various States for Study.

Striving to bring about a higher degree of safety in the operation of common carriers on the highways, the Interstate Commerce Commission will shortly inaugurate an investigation the need for federal regulation of the size and weight of motor vehicles.

Conduct of the investigation, and subsequent hearings, will be supervised by Charles S. Morgan, of Atlanta, assistant director, bureau of motor carriers, while associated with him will be H. H. Kelly, chief of the section of safety. Hearings will be held in various parts of the country, the dates to be announced later.

While the Interstate Commerce Commission is advised as to the major limitations prescribed by individual states, it desires to have for the record and its report a detailed statement of not only existing, but earlier limitations, according to W. P. Bartel, secretary of the commission. An inquiry of this nature will go to the Governors of various states for reference to appropriate officials.

With the co-operation of the Bureau of Public Roads and state agencies, the commission, in the line of its investigation, will assemble for selected areas data which will enable classification of roads according to degree of importance as instrumentalities in interstate transportation, either for hire or private. The "feeder" use of roads and the extent and character of through and local interstate traffic will be developed.

Information as to the general range of the first cost of the different types of highways will be gathered in order to estimate the cost of bringing the road systems and appurtenant facilities in selected areas to defined standards.

RAIL HEADS ASKED TO POOL ALL IDEAS

Officials, Experts Urged Aid in Solving Carrier Problems.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—The Chamber of Commerce of the United States invited the nation's transportation interests today to pool their ideas on solving problems of the railroads and other carriers.

George H. Davis, president of the chamber, summoned all interested persons to a conference September 14 and 15. He said congressional committees had planned to utilize findings of the conference in preparing a transportation program for the session of congress.

President Roosevelt asked last congress to do something for the railroads, but made no move on the idea of a dozen experts and officials which he submitted to the legislators. The issue of other legislation and controversy over a proposed reorganization of railroad wages caused great postpone action.

The conference was suggested by Davis, said by the chamber's transportation committee, which headed by Samuel T. B. B. of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway.

He predicted the meeting would consider "policies" having to do with railroad revenues, policies affecting economies in railroad operations, problems of competition among transportation agencies, the question of the organization of government agencies dealing with transportation.

WOODWARD HEADS VOCATIONAL SCHOOL

Assistant Principal and Former Tech High Teacher Receives Promotion.

Paul S. Woodward, 719 Cherry street, Atlanta, has been elected principal of the City Vocational school. It was announced yesterday by the city board of education. Woodward will assume duties September 1 to begin his 23rd year in the Atlanta school system.

A native of Florida, Woodward received his master's degree from the University of Illinois. He has studied at Columbia University, Emory University and the University of Georgia.

Before he came to the vocational school as assistant principal last year, Woodward had taught at Tech High for 20 years and was professor of chemistry at Georgia Tech for several years. He is well known for his organization and direction of the Tech High band.

The school, at the corner of Spring and Baker streets, has 3,000 men and women enrolled.

'Whoop' in Cough Warning Given By Health Chief

Watch out for the "whoop" in the cough of the youngsters, it may be whooping cough, Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, director of the State Department of Public Health, advised parents yesterday.

"As a pre-school season precaution, parents should keep the children, especially the young ones, away from any person with a cough," Dr. Abercrombie said. It is one of the most readily communicable diseases that involve the respiratory tract and causes more death than any other childhood disease, he added.

"At the first and even slightest symptoms of a cough, the child should be taken to the family physician, who is now able to give a serum, which is useful in prevention of the disease or is helpful in making the case lighter if the disease is contracted," he advised.

FIREMAN IS KILLED AS TRAIN HITS TRUCK

HUNTINGTON, Ind., Aug. 13.—One trainman was killed and another was injured critically today when five coaches and the engine of a Wabash railroad passenger train en route from Detroit to St. Louis, Mo., were derailed here.

The train hit a truck at a crossing near the edge of Huntington and the engine and five coaches turned over. The fireman, whose last name is Costello and who lived in Peru, Ind., was killed. Engineer George Morris was injured critically.

FREY CHARGES CIO AIDING COMMUNISTS

Workers have secured a stranglehold on New York city traction and taxicab companies," the witness declared.

In addition to charging that 280 Communist party members were or had been on CIO pay rolls, he gave the committee a list of 60 others high in the CIO ranks who, he said, were Communists or closely linked with Communism.

Among these were John Brophy, a CIO director; Francis Gorman, international president of the United Textile Workers; Wyndham Mortimer, vice president of the United Automobile Workers of America, who, Frey said, was a Communist official elected recently under the party name of George Baker, and Harry Bridges, chief of the Maritime Union of the Pacific. Frey produced in evidence what he said was a photographic copy of Bridges' party membership card.

Numerous of 230 more Communist volunteer workers in CIO affiliates were promised by Frey when he resumes testimony next week.

Chairman Dies, Democrat, Texas, of the investigating committee, said names of the complete party membership had been obtained and would be introduced as evidence.

Surface Skinned.

"They run into the thousands," he said, without disclosing how the committee obtained the documents.

"I've only swum the surface," Frey said when he concluded four hours of testimony.

The rise of Communism in the American labor movement, Frey said, dated from 1935, when "the Communist party in the United States completely scrapped its program so it could secure a controlling position within the CIO."

That was the year of the Communist international congress in Moscow, in which Communists were instructed to discard many old precepts and join with instead of opposing groups and parties with democratic interests. A protest from the American government against statements of American delegates was lodged during the congress, and American-Soviet relations cooled notably when Maxim Litvinoff, the Soviet spokesman on foreign affairs, rejected it.

At another point, Frey declared:

"I'm going to show this committee how Communists have gained control of the teachers' union in New York city. I'll name names. I'll show how their spread has been as rapid and dangerous in education as it has in the trade unions."

Switched to Religion.

Near the end of the day, Frey switched suddenly to the subject of religion, displaying a dozen Soviet anti-religious posters and reading extensively from speeches by Lenin, Stalin and others. He contrasted statement of Lenin's that "we hate Christianity and Christians" with the recent action of the American Communist party in deciding to increase its membership by enrolling Catholics, particularly those of the working class.

"It seems impossible that clergymen of any religious denominations could be deceived by any cunning Communist blandishments," Frey observed.

Often the witness reiterated that his charge of Communist activity in the CIO was not an attack against the CIO in general.

"In fairness to the majority of the membership it must be stated they are not Communists and they are opposed to Communism. John L. Lewis is opposed to Communism. In many local instances these members of the CIO have arisen in revolt against Communist leadership which had secured control and thrown it out. The CIO is not yet a Communist organization so far as the great majority of the rank and file is concerned. The fact seems to be that the CIO membership unwittingly became a carrier for the virus of Communism because of the attitude of its leaders."

Brophy Singled Out.

Brophy was singled out for particular mention although Frey made it clear he had no conclusive evidence Brophy was a Communist. Brophy once was expelled from the United Mine Workers' Union by Lewis, it was said.

"We cannot know the motives which afterward led John L. Lewis to appoint Mr. Brophy as his director for the CIO," Frey declared, "but from the record it is evident that if Mr. Lewis wanted someone as a director who could maintain the necessary contact with the Communist party in this country and its membership he could not have made a better selection."

Among organizations which Frey charged with being Communist-influenced or in some cases controlled he listed the United Textile Workers, United Furniture Workers of America, Fish and Cannery Workers' International Union, International Wood Workers of America, United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers of America; United Office and Professional Workers of America, Department Store Employees affiliated with the CIO, Fur Workers' International Union of New York, Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers' Union; Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians; Transport Workers, United Retail Employees of America, United Automobile Workers of America, National Maritime Workers' Union, American Communications Association, United Shoe Workers of America, and the United Radio, Electrical and Machine Workers' Union.

To Resume Testimony.

Frey is scheduled to resume his testimony Monday. Names of other witnesses have not yet been announced, but the committee has promised to give persons accused by the AFL leader a chance to reply.

Frey referred during his testi-

ADVISORY BOARD SPLITS IN REPORT

Visitors flocked to the hamlet, near Bridlington in Yorkshire, in buses which solicited business with such provocative signs as: "Your chance to say what you've seen in August."

Wold Newton urchins did a landoffice business selling snow in old jam jars to the gullible. The price was two cents a jar.

The majority report was signed by Chairman Clay, W. E. Mitchell, vice chairman; H. Lane Young, I. C. Milner, John K. Ottley, Thomas K. Gleiter, Herbert Porter, Clark Howell, L. M. Roberts, John Paschal, J. L. Edmonson, Alvin B. Cates, Marion Smith and G. K. Selden.

In the minority report, it was charged that the survey was unnecessary and would "contribute nothing helpful" to commissioners.

The minority report, signed by Dewey Johnson, president of the Atlanta Federation of Trades, and Charles Gramling, president of the Georgia Federation of Labor, charged the advisory committee had not made an exhaustive survey of county problems and that more study should be made before any recommendations in the majority report are followed.

"We are not undertaking to say finally that this procedure will completely solve your difficulty, but we earnestly recommend that this procedure be followed before resort be had to an increase in tax rates. If tax assessments are increased it should be done only as a part of a uniform program of fairly equating assessments in the county," the report said.

"We are willing to undertake to raise the money to employ the experts needed for the purposes indicated and to supervise their work, if you desire," the report added.

The majority report contained a survey of relief appropriations for the last five years, pointing out an increase of $200,000 for the entire period—from $365,000 in 1933 to $569,000 this year.

Investigation revealed no possibility of reducing the relief appropriations, it was said. On the contrary, commissioners were advised that they should increase necessity of increasing relief funds.

In the minority report, Gramling and Johnson said that "it was our understanding that we were requested to study the county's expenditures and revenue and make specific recommendations where we believed retrenchment possible. Following this, if expenditures still exceeded the revenue, we were to make recommendations as to the proper method of financing same."

They charged activities of the committee as a whole, reflected in the majority report, did not represent a careful study of those items. Any abandonment or curtailment of county projects and expenditures would be a "step backward or possibly an unwise and expensive procedure," it was said, without further study of possible effect such action would have.

50 Per Cent Increase.

Comparisons of annual budgets of the county from 1933 through 1937 were listed, showing that for five years the budget has risen approximately $300,000 a year. Total increase for the five-year period has been $1,600,000—or approximately 50 per cent, the report stated.

"We recommend that a special study be made of the whole activities of the county and all of its disbursements, with a view of seeing what saving can be effected. It seems to us almost impossible for it to be necessary for the expense of running the county to be as much greater in the five-year period as it is in fact shown to be by the comparative figures," it was said.

"Our experience has been that any business faced with a possible deficit can reduce its expense by at least 10 per cent," the report stated, adding that a 10 per cent saving would effect an approximate balance in the budget.

Suggestion that a "careful analysis" be made of the public works budget with a view of deferring to next year every item in the program possible was made.

Work under way should be strung out as much as possible to carry a

Two-Foot Snowfall Booms British Town

LONDON, Aug. 13.—(P)—The little village of Wold Newton counted up a small fortune brought by a two-foot snowfall today while the rest of Britain surveyed its loss from two days of fierce storms.

Visitors flocked to the hamlet, near Bridlington in Yorkshire, in buses which solicited business with such provocative signs as: "Your chance to say what you've seen in August."

Wold Newton urchins did a landoffice business selling snow in old jam jars to the gullible. The price was two cents a jar.

The conclusions of the minority report were:

1. It is equally incumbent upon commissioners that they retain their duty of raising revenue as well as the expenditure of funds.

Relief Inadequate.

2. The expenditure for relief and public welfare is inadequate, and the appropriation for these purposes should be increased immediately.

3. If economies can be effected in any department of Fulton county without impairing the services the citizens desire and without a reduction in wages or salaries, which certainly are not excessive, it should be done immediately.

4. Additional government services which the taxpayers demand cost money and they should be, and in our opinion are, willing to, an equitable levy.

pay for them.

Recommendations of the minority were:

1. That the necessary additions be raised as far as possible by the equalization of a-ments, giving particular at-

and consideration to regions received by them.

2. Any additional revenue raised by making a just, fair equitable levy.

Copies of America's Cook Book—the widely-hailed 1,006-page guide to buying, preparing and serving food economically and attractively—are being sent to every woman of Georgia to housewives who are participating in The Constitution's interesting plan for obtaining the book.

Two new six months' subscriptions to The Constitution is the "price" of the book. The America's Cook Book can be given as a premium, and retail price of $2.50 cannot be charged. The Constitution will send the book and present it to one of the subscribers for one month.

It is much more than a compilation of recipes—complete as in this respect—so the book shows how to buy, how to evaluate the calory and vitamin content of foods, how to prepare for convalescents, anemics, overweight and overweight folk for many other classifications giving special consideration, gives other highly necessary information.

Order blanks are available in the pages of The Constitution or at the publication offices, Forsyth and Alabama

An expert whose duty it is to instruct thousands in cooking procedure finds America's Cook Book the greatest single contribution of its kind made to housewives in this generation.

Miss Fern Snider, director of the Home Service Division of the Georgia Power Company, in endorsing America's Cook Book in the highest terms, also throws an interesting personal light on the preparation of this revolutionary culinary encyclopedia from 20 years of actual tests.

Says Miss Snider:

"One of the people who made America's Cook Book possible is my very good friend, Miss Eloise Davison, who is a home economist on the staff of the Home Institute. Miss Davison sent me a copy of the book several months ago, and I have nothing in my reference library to which I refer often and which is more helpful.

"I felt when I received it that I could depend upon its recipes being accurate, practical and popular because I know Miss Davison to be a very practical person, and one who would lend her efforts only to a piece of work that would be a real contribution to homemaking literature.

"I am delighted indeed that many Georgia women will have an opportunity to have this of the Sudeten Germans, led by militant Konrad Henlein.

Manipulation Scare?

Belief grew that the "August 13 scare" may have been encouraged by financial manipulators seeking to exploit fluctuating currencies.

For days the war psychology has been reflected in huge gold purchases, the reported flight of German capital and strengthening of the American dollar.

The accelerated European demand for bar gold put gold prices in London up to a new three-year peak and buying reached the fastest pace for a Saturday session this year.

Cause Obscured.

Like most of Europe's recurrent war hysterias, the actual cause or seat of today's was obscured. London newspapers told of acute tension in France. French newspapers said London was gravely concerned, but that the French government refused to share these fears.

Both French and British governments denied officially that they had made any representations to Germany regarding Hitler's army maneuvers and the fact that United States Ambassador William C. Bullitt conferred with French Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet Friday night proved to have little if any significance.

Bullitt asked Bonnet about the newspaper reports of German army preparations but, according to his secretary, made no mention of the aggravated Italo-French tension along the southern Alpine border.

EUROPE HOLDS BREATH, ADOLF TOYS WITH FIRE

By JOHN EVANS,
Associated Press General Foreign Editor.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—(AP)—Adolf Hitler doesn't smoke, but Europe holds her breath while he lights matches over powder barrels.

That's what is happening abroad now. Cold sweat is on the brows of most statesmen because they fear Germany may swallow her little neighbor Czechoslovakia as she did Austria, March 13, exactly five months ago. Their immediate fear is that something may happen while Germany holds her regular army maneuvers beginning Monday.

This isn't a "war scare."

It is a real fear of war.

It is a fear that fills the souls of statesmen; yet they haven't any evidence. They don't know there will be war and when they talk coolly and privately they admit there are more reasons for peace than for war.

Czechs' Complications.

The trouble is chiefly about Czechoslovakia, but there are complications.

Hitler wants control of all Germans. He got Austria with 7,500,000 of them. There remains a 3,500,000 Germanic minority in the western end of sausage-shaped Czechoslovakia which is imbedded in Greater Germany. Encouraged by Germany, the Germanic element, more than one-fifth the population, demands autonomy.

Czechoslovakia sees the handwriting on the wall.

She is resigned to making concessions, but determined to fight Germany rather than surrender real control of that part of the rich, mountainous, easily defended country guarded by one of the best little armies in the world and equipped by the famous Skoda munition plants.

Sacrificial Goat.

Czechoslovakia is the sacrificial goat. All she can hope for is a chance to choose the sauce in which she will be cooked.

There are three sauces:

1. Germany may take over Czechoslovakia or part of it with technical legality—"technical legality" from the German viewpoint—as she went into Austria.

2. Czechoslovakia may fight. Whether she wins or loses she will be a battlefield.

3. Czechoslovakia may maintain peaceful possession of her own country by such concessions to the Germanic minority that she would weaken and disintegrate. She is a country of minorities and Hungarian, Polish, Ruthenian and part of the Slovak elements ask some degree of autonomy.

The world worries because Europe is a mesh of trouble and Czechoslovakia is only a symbol of the real trouble.

"Halt Hitler."

"Halt Hitler" is the task most of Europe has set herself.

That means blocking his "Drang Nach Osten" (march to the east) which is intended to give Germany economic or political and even actual control of southeastern Europe. That is an old German dream of long before Hitler.

The danger of world war lies in other countries' determination to prevent Germany becoming master of the continent.

France and Russia have pledged their aid to Czechoslovakia.

Britain, with the world's greatest armament program, said "it might be difficult for her to keep out if a war started."

Pledges are one thing.

Execution of them is another.

This is the normal season for military maneuvers. The United States, like Europe, has been playing these military games. France is excited because of changes in German maneuvers this year, with many reservists called to the colors and the country mobilized behind the lines as in real war. Germany, therefore, soon will be ready to attack if she wishes.

There is no evidence Hitler intends such an attack, but if he does, France reasons, he could be a week ahead of the other fellows. His military machine would be rolling before the others could blow their bugles.

Professor Wyckoff pointed out that opportunities for graduates in public health engineering will greatly increase as the south becomes more industrialized—which is now the aim of organized forces working toward securing more industries in this section.

HITLER AND BALBO MEET FOR TALKS

BERCHTESGADEN, Germany, Aug. 13.—(AP)—Adolf Hitler and Marshal Italo Balbo, governor of Italian Libya, chatted for an hour and a half today at Hitler's mountain retreat here.

Balbo, on a two-week inspection of Germany's air force, was accompanied to Berchtesgaden by a number of high German and Italian officials.

The Italian marshal arrived in an automobile with Rudolf Hess, minister without portfolio, who met him at Munich.

Hitler met his visitors at the entrance to his retreat. They sat around a blazing fireplace as a cold rain fell outside. There was a cordial farewell from the Fuehrer when Balbo terminated his visit.

The new course, beginning this autumn, will fit graduates for federal, municipal, state and county public health posts, as well as work in health and sanitation for private organizations, he said.

The study will be about equally divided among civil engineering, chemistry, biology and mechanical engineering, the department head asserted.

"According to the statements of public health officials from the various states, one of their big problems is securing properly trained men to direct and carry on this type of work," he said.

"It has been necessary to secure men with inadequate training and send these men to colleges in the north for basic training in public health. It is a reflection on the policy of our educational systems that this should be so. The Georgia School of Technology is therefore only fulfilling its obligation to assert."

It is a real fear of war.

It is a fear that fills the souls of statesmen; yet they haven't any evidence. They don't know there will be war and when they talk coolly and privately they admit there are more reasons for peace than for war.

SOCIAL PROGRESS IS RIVERS' TOPIC

Governor Attacks Foes of Beneficial Measures in Gainesville Talk.

GAINESVILLE, Ga., Aug. 13.—Governor Rivers attacked the "enemies of social progress in Georgia" in a campaign speech here today, asserting the "people on September 14 are going to bury them again under an avalanche of ballots."

"This small group that has all along fought old-age pensions and other beneficial measures can no more parade in this campaign as friends of the underprivileged and get away with it than a leopard can change its spots."

"In the short space of 18 months we have whipped the enemies of the social security program in the legislature and in the courts and we are paying pensions to the old people and benefits to the blind and to dependent children. We have done what we said we would do. We are being opposed today, as we have always been opposed, by those who don't believe the state government should help those who cannot help themselves. They still want to wreck the program the people commissioned me to carry out."

"They can no more fool the people now than they could fool the people in the past. They have shown their true colors in the past and the people are on to them now. And at the polls on September 14 they will be shown under again. We will be able to carry on and complete the job the people told us to do."

ANNULMENT SOUGHT BY PARENTS OF GIRL, 16

SARASOTA, Fla., Aug. 13.—(UPI)—Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hand sought today the annulment of the marriage of their 16-year-old daughter, Lila Juno, to Gilbert Bradley, grocery clerk.

The parents said in a circuit court action their daughter had not lived with Bradley. They said she gave her age as 21 years when the couple was married by the Manatee county judge.

Where Will Roosevelt Strike Next? Maryland Awaits Monday Address

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON,
WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—(UPI)—

Uncertainty as to where the Roosevelt party primary lightning may strike next gives an atmosphere of breathless expectancy to the two weeks of campaigning immediately ahead. Otherwise, this period in which four states pick party tickets seems politically featureless.

The President's radio address

Monday night, observing the third anniversary of the social security act, affords him an opportunity to carry into Maryland the crusade began against Senator George in Georgia. Representative David J. Lewis, who is running against Senator Tydings for the Democratic senatorial nomination in that state, had a big hand in framing and passing the social security law. Mr. Roosevelt could in effect endorse Lewis against Tydings without naming either, since Tyd-ings voted "present" when the act passed the senate.

COUNTY WINS FIGHT TO COLLECT TAXES

Arbitrators Rule Out-of- State Mortgage Companies Are Liable Here.

have arisen from business operations in Fulton county are taxable here for the life of the mortgage, without respect to sales or transfers, and whoever acquires them is subject to taxation.

Law Very Plain.

"Law on the question is very plain. Our citizens who are engaged in this type of business are taxed and it would be an unusual law that would hold nonresident corporations exempt and thereby discriminate against citizens of this state engaged in similar business."

"To enforce the collection of this money and to make their security enforceable, they use our laws and our courts. It is only just that they pay the same tax for their protection as our citizens. Any other condition would be absurd and unjust."

"In the cases of Maryland Casualty Company, Allied Mortgage Company and Associated Mortgage Companies, the board of arbitrators held that insufficient evidence had been presented by the county to show that those companies were taxable on the mortgages as assessed against them. We are now making assessments against the corporations who originally made these loans."

The board of arbitrators, selected jointly by the defendant mortgage and insurance companies, is composed of Attorneys James A. Branch, George Finch and Robert T. Eustard.

DR. G. G. DOSS RITES
WILL BE HELD TODAY

Funeral services for Dr. George G. Doss, 48, of 1540 Bankhead avenue, N. W., who died unexpectedly Thursday of a heart attack, will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon in Spring Hill. The Rev. J. C. Daniel will officiate, and burial will be in Crown Hill cemetery.

A native of Milton county, he was a graduate of Atlanta-Southern Dental College. Dr. Doss had lived here for the last 10 years.

Hardwick Defeated.

"The only obvious thing for all to do who are jealous of the reputation of the party and the success of the government in the present crisis is to combine in the support of Mr. Harris."

Harris at that time was running against the incumbent, Thomas J. Hardwick. He was a member of the Federal Trade Commission. Harris defeated Hardwick, William Schley Hardwick and others in the primary of that year.

Incidentally, President Wilson's letter of endorsement of Mr. Harris came on August 11 of that year, 20 years to the day before President Roosevelt endorsed Camp.

Hardwick Defeated.

"While in Warm Springs I discussed with Administrator Harry Hopkins, of the WPA, the operation of the relief agencies in Atlanta, and urged upon him the necessity for less delay in the certification of applicants for work on WPA and especially more rapid consideration of applications for surplus food. I have found since returning home that these applicants must wait from two to three weeks for interviews. In my opinion, this is an intolerable condition and must be remedied."

"Next week I expect to address leaders of the Atlanta Federation of Trade at the Labor Temple on Tuesday, and on Wednesday will address the meeting in the DeKalb county court house at 4 p. m. sponsored by the DeKalb League of Women Voters.

"My friends assure me that on September 14 I will be renominated by an overwhelming majority.

I am grateful for the many assurances of support which have come to me from all sections of the fifth district.

GEORGIA AWAITS SPEAKING BARRAGE BY ALL CANDIDATES

full week's program outlined by Senator George, Governor Rivers.

With the incumbents, Senator Walter F. George and Governor Rivers, making more public appearances than at any time since their campaign got under way, Georgia this week will hear a barrage of speeches which will be marked by stiff schedules for all candidates for major offices.

Senator George will open the week with a speech tomorrow at Waycross, the first he has made since President Roosevelt announced his opposition to his re-election.

The Waycross speech, which will be delivered at 11:30 o'clock, Eastern standard time, is awaited with interest.

Governor Rivers will address his weekly meeting atop the Ansley Hotel at 8 o'clock tomorrow night, discussing "Old-Age Pensions and Social Security."

Declares Pride in Not Receiving Indorsement of President.

CARROLLTON, Ga., Aug. 13.—(AP)—Former Governor Eugene Talmadge said today he was "proud I have received no indorsement" from President Roosevelt, the utilities or railroads "in my efforts to go to the senate."

The former Governor asserted "Should I be forced to go to the United States senate with the stamp of the power trusts or with the stamp of the President . . . on my shoulders I would feel it my duty to represent the power trusts or the President and not the people. I am, however, receiving the stamp of approval from the throngs of people of this state."

He attacked Incumbent Senator Walter F. George, declaring "I want to talk one way and vote that same way on any bill . . . rather than speaking against a bill and voting for it as Senator George does."

WEEKLY RALLIES SET FOR GEORGE

Senator To Be Principal Speaker Every Saturday.

Weekly Saturday night rallies, at which Senator Walter F. George will be the principal speaker, are to be held during the remainder of the senatorial campaign, under sponsorship of the Fulton County George Club, according to announcement yesterday by Chairman Wiley L. Moore.

"Senator George will deliver an address every Saturday night in the Georgian room of the Henry Grady hotel," Mr. Moore said.

Loudspeaking equipment will be installed so that the senator may be heard in the lobby of the hotel and on the street.

"We are inviting all friends of Senator George to meet with us at these Saturday night rallies and to visit the headquarters of the Fulton County Senator George Club at room 430, Piedmont hotel, for any information or assistance in the campaign.

"Our membership is mounting tremendously, especially since Roosevelt's speech at Barnesville Thursday."

BOND ALMAND RALLY IS PLANNED THURSDAY

Friends of Bond Almand, assistant city attorney and candidate for judge of the superior court, will hold a rally at 8 o'clock Thursday night on the roof of the Ansley hotel, it was announced yesterday.

Plans for carrying on Mr. Almand's campaign until the primary September 14 will be discussed at the meeting.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS
UNION CITY, GEORGIA.

Sealed proposals will be received by Union City, Georgia, at the office of the Clerk, until 2:00 p. m., Central Standard time, August 22, 1938, and thereafter for the construction of a DRILLED WELL, according to specifications on file in the office of the Clerk.

A copy of said specifications and proposal form will be available for examination by prospective bidders at the office of the Clerk and at the office of the Engineers, and copies thereof may be obtained from the office of the Clerk for the sum of FIVE DOLLARS ($5.00).

Deposits will be refunded to each actual bidder within a reasonable time after receipt of proposals. Deposits of those bidders that are accepted will be retained with the specifications in good condition within ten days after the date of opening of the bids, and the bidder retaining the actual cost of reproduction.

All proposals must be accompanied by a certified check or cashier's check in bond for an amount not less than 5% of the proposal, made payable to Union City, Georgia.

The funds will be available for the construction of the well and waterworks system amount to approximately $22,100.00.

The terms will be to reject any or all proposals and to waive normally. After proposals are opened no bidder will be allowed to withdraw his proposal for a period of 30 days.

Roosevelt Popularity Is Unchanged Following Western Campaign Trip

Institute Survey Gives President 56 Per Cent of Major Party Vote.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP, Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—President Roosevelt's month of travel, which took him on a campaign trip across the continent and a vacation of sea fishing and sun tan, brought no net change in his national popularity with American voters, according to the Institute's latest monthly presidential index.

Today the Institute's barometer shows his popular strength at 56 per cent—the same as last month.

There were minor fluctuations of his popularity in various geographical sections—notably a slight rise in the far western area through which he traveled. But for the nation as a whole the trend of his popularity flattened out on a straight line during the month, after having undergone a rise in June and early July.

Although the President continues to hold the confidence of a substantial majority of voters, he has suffered large losses since 1936 in the heavily populated geographical sections which are politically the most important—the New England, middle Atlantic, east central and west central states. This area contains more than three-fifths of the nation's population, sends 272 members to the house of representatives, and is certain to be the chief battleground of the 1938 congressional campaign. The President has suffered losses of popularity in these four sections particularly since last October, when the business slump began. Today's cross-section survey finds that he has held his ground there since last month. But in two of the four sections his popularity is perilously close to the 50 per cent line and in one section, New England, it is actually under the line.

NEBRASKA JUDGE DIES.

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—(AP)—Judge Charles A. Goss, 74, for 11 years chief justice of the Nebraska supreme court, died here today.

M'RAE ATTACKS ROOSEVELT SPEECH

Asserts 'Yes Men' Dare Not Interfere With Program of President.

NASHVILLE, Ga., Aug. 13.—(AP)—William G. McRae, senatorial candidate, said in a campaign speech here today "the necessary steps to make the President a real dictator for the people to be dumb enough to name his 'rubber stamp' to the congress."

He referred to President Roosevelt's flat indorsement of Lawrence S. Camp,

"These 'yes men' dare not interfere with the President running the legislative department of the government," he said. "The next step will be to abolish the legislative department."

"Then comes dictatorship. This is the very way Hitler and Mussolini did it. When the American people surrender their right to choose their officials then democracy and human liberty will be 'Gone With the Wind.'

George Leaders Told Fund Need Is 'Desperate'

George leaders in every county in the state yesterday were asked by campaign headquarters here to aid in financing the senator's campaign.

Price Gilbert, treasurer of the George campaign fund, in telegrams to county leaders, said the need is desperate.

The treasurer's telegram follows:

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 13, 1938.

Senator George's campaign is in desperate need of funds. Won't you immediately canvass your community personally and with helpers and request donations in any amount and send to the undersigned? The necessary and essential expenses of a campaign demand this immediate action.

Senator George must have help from the people in order to carry on his fight for the people of Georgia and the south.

PRICE GILBERT, Treas.

Walter F. George Campaign Committee.

MANGHAM PREDICTS DEFEAT OF RIVERS

Blasts Governor for 'Refusing To Discuss Great Questions in Georgia.'

LINCOLNTON, Ga., Aug. 13.—(AP)—Governor Candidate John J. Mangham, completing a campaign tour of south Georgia, told a political gathering here today "the people of this state are not going to re-elect Governor Rivers."

"I have received direct evidence of this fact," he said, "on the trip I have made through the southern part of the state."

Mangham said the Governor had failed to discuss "any of the vital issues of this campaign," adding, "he will have to discuss them and state his position on them before he will get the support of a great majority of voters."

"In my race," he said, "I plainly advocate a cessation of new taxes, a two-cent cut in gasoline taxes, a 25 per cent slash in the big salaries, abolition of the poll tax, justice to the school teachers of Georgia and adoption of the state liquor store plan."

Usually congress designates one day during a session to eulogize recently deceased members of congress.

Mercy in Case of Young
Father of Two.

SYLVA, Ga., Aug. 13.—(P)—Judge J. T. Grice today sentenced Osborne Newton to life imprisonment after a Screen county superior court jury recommended mercy in convicting him of the turpentine swaying slaying last September of wealthy Charlie Daughtry.

The case went to the jury last night.

Motion for a new trial will be heard August 27 at a Glendale. On the same day, Judge Grice will hear a similar plea for John Burns, also convicted for Daughtry's death.

A mistrial was declared in the case of a third defendant, Lonnie Lanier, after a jury deliberated overnight and failed to reach a verdict.

Prior to being sentenced today, Newton, married and the father of two children, told the killing: "I am innocent of the killing of Mr. Daughtry and I hope some day it will be cleared up and justice done."

Newton is in his 20's.

Other defendants awaiting trial for the Daughtry slaying are Albert Cobb, Savannah attorney; Joe Newton, Bloomingdale merchant, and Ralph Newton, son of Joe Newton.

RECOUNT DEMANDED IN ROME BOND VOTE

Illegal Registrations Charged by Group Seeking To Defeat School Issue.

ROME, Ga., Aug. 13.—A protest demanding a recount of votes in the city-wide election here yesterday on a $395,000 municipal bond issue was filed today by Barry Wright, attorney for M. S. Lanier, T. H. Booze and others.

In addition to calling for a recount, the protest charged that a large number of persons were illegally registered and that the school bond issue would have been defeated if the registration list had not been improper.

Final returns had shown that the $150,000 bond issue for school improvements was carried by two votes above the necessary constitutional majority of 3,165, while the $245,000 waterworks bond issue was defeated by seven votes.

The city commission will meet again Monday to conduct a recount and decide whether the registration list is to be re-purged and whether to call another election.

CONDUCT OF TRIO

Army Denies That Troublemakers Seized by Marines
Have Military Status.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 13.—(P)—The chief of the Japanese army political service in Shanghai insisted tonight three Japanese seized as trouble-makers in a clash with United States marines were without military status.

However, two of the men admitted they were army personnel.

Colonel Hitoshi Hamada said the men were "merely army employees" but he added there would be an investigation and possible punishment for them.

The three Japanese, waving pistols, were demanding that Chinese of the neighborhood lower the Chinese Nationalist flags hoisted in observance of the first anniversary of Shanghai hostilities.

Sergeant Marvin drew his own pistol and ordered the men to sit down in the automobile. Instead they trained their weapons on him. Then a marine sentry ran up with an automatic rifle. Two of the Japanese surrendered their guns but the third resisted. He was hit on the head.

Linked with their arrest was the whole jurisdictional tangle of this highly internationalized metropolis.

At least three Chinese were killed and 17 injured in bombings and other disorders yesterday and today.

JAPANESE STRIVE TO END DEADLOCK

Begin Second Year of Yangtze Valley Campaign.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 13.—(P)—Entering the second year of their Yangtze valley campaign, Japanese forces strove desperately today to break the deadlock which has held up the drive toward Hankow for more than two weeks.

A Japanese column was reported near Juichang on the center of the Chinese line, about 100 miles southeast of Hankow, the provisional Chinese capital.

From Juichang the Japanese hoped to spread overland to the Canton-Hankow railway south of Hankow and choke off the chief artery for supplies to defend the metropolis.

On the Hwangmei, or northern wing of the Japanese offensive and on the Shahochoen, or southern wing, the Japanese were stale-mated by stubborn Chinese resistance.

Adding in the official pounds figures for the first two weeks 49,192,256, this would bring the state's actual sales of bright tobacco above the approximate 76,000,000 pounds allotted growers under marketing quotas, created by vote of the growers under the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

$1,262,000 CARGO OF TOBACCO SHIPPED

SAVANNAH, Ga., Aug. 13.—(P)—The most valuable cargo to leave Savannah port this year—$1,262,000 worth of Georgia's 1938 tobacco crop—was loaded by the British steamer Langleebrook, which sailed to day for Liverpool.

The sailing of the Langleebrook marked the beginning of the movement of Georgia tobacco through Savannah to foreign countries.

Five other ships are expected to call here for cargoes of tobacco, and each ship will take a million dollar load.

For the season was borne out in report on the combined Georgia-Florida markets by the United States Bureau of Agriculture.

Third Week Sales.

Bernard Lubschutz, reporting for the bureau, put third week sales for all markets at 40,305,2 pounds for an average of 16.93.

Season sales amounted to 101,540,400 pounds for an average of 21.38, he said. This would figure well over $20,000,000.

"Taken generally, average price for tobacco sold on Georgia and Florida markets this week declined approximately 8 per cent as compared with the previous week," Lubschutz said.

"Leaf smoking leaf showed the largest losses, decreasing per cent and 13 per cent, respectively. Lugs were down 8 per cent. Some lugs and smoking leaf grades were off as much as a hundred pounds."

The quality of the tobacco was not as good as that of the previous week, he continued, and less was offered in the largest volume.

Markets To Close.

Several markets will close for the season in the early part next week and most of the markets will be closed by the end of the week, Lubschutz said.

Third week sales last year amounted to 25,739,126 pounds for $4,239,645.32, an average of 16.4. State Department of Agriculture records show, the comparable season's total, counting all markets, was $14,906,566.30. The final week saw 6,186,082 pounds for $779,467.79, an average of

An equivalent final week in 1938, plus the markets reported today, would put the state to well ahead of all previous seasons.

14 ROAD PROJECTS LET; BID REJECTED

Offer for Lowndes Work Exceeded Funds Allocated, Miller Reveals.

The State Highway Board awarded contracts yesterday for 14 projects to cost approximately $225,000 and rejected bids on one project in Lowndes county.

The Lowndes project called for concrete paving of 0.810 miles of road from Valdosta to Quincy, Fla., beginning three miles south of Valdosta. The apparent low bid submitted for the job yesterday was $29,970.60 by Waycross Construction Company, Valdosta.

The structure is one story and a basement, with grounds ample for barbecues and other post activities. A barbecue pit already has been erected, and a large old-style iron wash pot has been mounted for cooking Brunswick stew.

Members and their friends recently staged an entertainment, serving food prepared on the grounds.

A large meeting hall is located on the first floor, which is finished with beautifully matched wall board. The chimney is large and is of red brick, attractively designed.

There are two rooms off the main floor for equipment and for committee meetings.

In the basement is a large gathering room and a furnace.

American flags fly from each end of the porch.

Raymond H. Fambrough, post commander, and his aides have worked tirelessly to complete the building.

"We wanted a meeting place, and when it became known that the post had little funds, friends donated the lot," he said. "We just kept plugging and now have one of the best club homes in this section of Georgia."

"Every member of the post is proud of it. Leaders of other civic organizations have given us their moral support and have encouraged us in our efforts."

The cost of the structure is about $4,000. The lot was donated to the post, and stands high overlooking the Atlanta-Monroe highway.

OPENING DATE SET FOR GUILD NURSERY

Latest Educational Equipment Installed.

Latest educational equipment has been installed in the Service Guild Nursery school, opening on August 22, Mrs. Lyons Joel

III, chairman of the equipment committee, announced yesterday.

The school, sponsored co-operatively with the Jewish Educational Alliance, had postponed the original opening date in order to accommodate enrollment of preschool children, she said.

The school is completely equipped, and the slogan for the project is "A center for children's training and adult education," Mrs. Joel said. Everything from swings and slides to a juvenile and adult library, plans for which have been recently launched, is included in the equipment.

The total length of the coastline of the United States and all its outlying possessions is nearly 50,000 miles.

ELECTRICAL GROUP TO STAGE OUTINGAtlantans Plan Golf Turnney
at Druid Hills.

The Atlanta Electrical Association will stage its annual outing at Druid Hills Golf Club Friday, August 26, it was announced yesterday.

Approximately 200 members of the organization are expected to participate.

The program will open at 1 o'clock in the afternoon when a golf tournament will be held. A bridge tournament, beginning at 4:30 o'clock, has been arranged for women, while swimming, horseshoe pitching and games and stunts will be included. Featuring the program will be a barbecue to be served at 6:30 o'clock, to be followed by dancing, music for which will be furnished by a well-known local orchestra.

Al Foster, the only honorary life member of the association, will officiate as toastmaster.

IMPROVEMENT PLAN WILL BE STUDIED BY NEW COMMITTEE

Council Will Consider $30,000,000 Program at Meeting Tomorrow.

A new, compact committee to study financial aspects of the proposed $30,000,000 public improvement program was appointed yesterday, while city council is scheduled to consider the program at its meeting tomorrow afternoon.

Acting with the consent of Mayor Hartsfield and the county commissioners, Frank H. Neely, vice chairman of the city-county public improvements committee, named the following to co-ordinate the program: Robert Strickland, chairman; E. Eugene Harrington, Ryburn Clay, W. E. Mitchell, J. P. Allen, Frank Carter, F. H. Neely and Cicero Kendrick.

The members represent the public improvements committee, the county's financial advisory committee, and the city's financial advisory group.

DETERMINED CAPACITY.

They will determine the city's and the county's financial capacity to engage in the huge public improvement program.

Council probably will refer the program, transmitted to it by Mayor Hartsfield, to a committee for consideration.

Among other matters to come up before council will be the police committee's recommendation that all right turns on red traffic lights throughout the city be banned by ordinance.

STREET IMPROVEMENTS.

Proposed extension of West Peachtree street, Brookwood drive and Brighton road, and construction of Collier street, recommended by the public works committee, will be voted on also. A WPA grading project will be applied for if council approves acceptance of rights of way for the extensions.

Councilman John A. White yesterday said right of way for the extension of Williams street from Fourteenth street to Brookwood, has been donated to the city by the Atlantic Steel Company. He will propose acceptance of the right of way.

Council is expected to approve the tax committee's recommendation that license fees on large merchant marks be reduced from $500 to $250 per year.

CITY SEEKS FUNDS FOR TWO PROJECTS

Steps toward obtaining $3,500,000 worth of federal aid for Atlanta projects were taken yesterday by Mayor Hartsfield.

He signed the formal application to WPA for a $3,000,000 supplementary sewer project, and made informal application to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Public Works Administration for $500,000 for a new city incinerator.

Plans for the incinerator, as outlined in the proposed $30,000,000 public improvement program, call for erection of a new, self-liquidating incinerator to replace the city's 25-year-old present plant.

WRITES TO OFFICIALS.

Hartsfield yesterday wrote RFC and PWA officials concerning the $500,000 loan necessary to erect the new plant.

He and H. J. Cates, chief of the sanitary department, pointed out that excess steam from a modern incinerator would produce enough additional revenue to pay off the loan from the federal agencies over a period of years.

Application to the PWA for both a grant and a loan and to the RFC for a loan will be made soon, it was said.

DELAPIDATED BOILERS.

Cates asserted the present plant is running above its normal capacity at the present time, and declared new ones are absolutely necessary if the city is to continue to burn its garbage and refuse.

WPA officials were confident that the $3,000,000 supplementary sewer project will be approved in Washington. The city is required to put up $500,000 in connection with the project but this sum has not been appropriated. The city will not be required to put up more than it has capacity to pay, it was said.

Miles of sewer lines constructed in the $8,000,000 metropolitan sewer system are to be "back-filled" and sewer disposal plants are to be landscaped and graded in the new project. Plans call for construction of additional lateral sewers and also open storm sewers.

STATE BAR PLANS MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

CLOSER RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN ELIGIBLE LAWYERS IN GEORGIA.

A campaign to increase membership in the Georgia Bar Association and to "bring about a closer relationship of all eligible Georgia lawyers" will be launched tomorrow, and will continue through August, it was announced yesterday.

The campaign is directed toward obtaining a 100 per cent membership of the lawyers residing in Fulton, DeKalb, Newton, Rockdale and Clayton counties—which comprise the Atlanta judicial circuit and the Stone Mountain judicial circuit.

Municipal Court Judge Luther Z. Rosser, treasurer of the Georgia Bar Association, is general chairman of the campaign committee. John T. Dennis, president of the Atlanta Bar Association; John L. Tye Jr., member of the board of governors of the state bar; John A. Dunaway, president of the Stone Mountain Bar Association; Judge Augustus M. Roan, member of the Stone Mountain association board of governors; Judge O. J. Coogler of Jonesboro, and C. C. King of Covington, are serving on the committee with Judge Rosser.

NYA INCREASES PAY IN UNSKILLED CLASS

Earnings Raised From 17.5 to 24 Per Cent for 3,000 Youths.

Monthly earnings of unskilled workers on all National Youth Administration projects in Georgia have been increased from 17.5 per cent in larger counties to 24 per cent in smaller counties, D. B. Lasseter, state NYA director, announced yesterday.

The new wage schedule, which will result in the addition of approximately $7,500 to the earnings of 3,000 boys and girls in the state, becomes effective Tuesday.

Under the new schedule, the minimum monthly earnings for unskilled youths will be raised from $9.12 to $12, while the maximum earnings for the same class will be increased from $12 a month to $14.10. Hours on all projects vary from a minimum of 44 hours in the larger counties to a maximum of 60 hours in the smaller counties.

NYA work provides part-time employment for youths between the ages of 18 and 24 years, inclusive, who are out of school, unemployed, and certified as eligible by the county department of public welfare. The projects are designed to give practical vocational training leading to a permanent self-sustaining place in community life.

A total of $1,249,200 has been allotted the state for the NYA project program during the fiscal year beginning July 1. With an average expenditure of $104,100 a month, about 5,200 youths will receive part-time employment of a vocational nature during the ensuing year, Lasseter said. Of this amount, approximately $38,500 will be expended each month to keep 1,000 youths at 11 NYA resident training projects operated in conjunction with established educational institutions in Georgia, while the $65,600 will provide work for 4,100 young people in their own communities.

The woman who is known all over the wide world as the "Poppy Lady" Thursday presented President Roosevelt a basket of flowers—but they were dahlias.

Miss Moina Michael, of Athens, who originated the Poppy Day idea and has seen it grow to a point where $3,000,000 was raised in a year for the benefit of disabled soldiers, was a special visitor to the presidential train by special invitation of the nation's chief executive.

President Roosevelt said he knew all about Miss Michael.

"If you knew as much about me as I know about you, maybe you would love me as much as I love you," she said.

The President praised Miss Michael for her work that continues on an international scale.

The association restricts its membership to women who have been admitted to the Georgia bar and is a member of the National Association of Women Lawyers with the aim of promoting legal science among women, she added.

FINAL RITES TODAY FOR W. G. MADDOX, 26

Funeral services for William G. Maddox, 26, who died Thursday morning in Savannah of injuries sustained in a gun battle with state highway patrolmen Wednesday night near Ways Station, will be conducted at 2 o'clock this afternoon in the chapel of Harry G. Poole by the Rev. T. T. Davis.

Burial will be at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning in National cemetery, Marietta.

Maddox and his companion, Jimmy Langford, who was instantly killed, were identified by employees of the Lee Baking Company as the men who held up the plant and escaped with a sum of money several weeks ago. Maddox lived at 722 Grant st. southeast.

The sculptor of the Statue of Liberty was Frederick Bartholdi.

Julius Hughes and Charlie Dannals Clash for City Golf Title

STATE CHAMPION
EEKS 'DOUBLE'
T CAPITAL CITY

thirty-Six Hole Championship Battle Begins at 10 O'Clock Today.

By ROY WHITE.
Charlie Dannals Jr., the medalist, and Dr. Julius Hughes, Georgia's amateur champion and runner-up to Dannals in the qualifying round, will battle 36 holes today over the Capital City course at Atlanta's annual amateur golf ampionship.

Dannals fought his way to the final round with two well-earned victories Saturday. He beat Charlie Barnes, a municipal player, in the 18th green in the quarterfinals and eliminated Gene Gaillard, a gangling youngster from the Druid Hills course, 5-3, in the afternoon semifinals.

Dr. Hughes defeated Charlie Dannals, 2-1, in the morning and had to shoot par golf in the afternoon to beat Cliff Eley, an East Lake star, on the 18th green in the afternoon.

In the other quarter-finals,
Dannals beat Charlie Ozmer, 3-1, and Eley eliminated Bobby Dodd, 3.

MISSSES CHANCE.
Dr. Hughes, holder of every important golf title in Georgia at one time or another, has a chance to set a new record this afternoon.
He won the Georgia amateur in July at Druid Hills and a victory today will make it the first double in Georgia's history.

Charlie Black Jr. has held the city and state titles at the same time, but they were won in different years.

That Hughes - Eley match, played under a blistering sun, was one of the finest that has been played in any tournament in the state this year.

Eley was hotter than the blistering sun for eight holes. He went two-up at three, lost the eighth an eagle, and was all square at the turn, as his second at nine find the rough. It was a tough break at the ninth as his ball was a deep divot, and he had to lose stroke getting out.

Eley had only nine putts for the 18 holes, and was even with par figures. The East Lake player had "gimme" birdie at eight but it was not good enough to win the hole.

Dr. Hughes, with an eagle two at eight and a birdie at nine, which squared the match, was under perfect figures for the round. They halved four straight holes on the back nine, both getting birdies at 12 and the match was all square going to 13.

CONCEDED 13TH.
Dr. Hughes conceded the 13th a birdie after pitching over the green from the rough at the left.
The Georgia champion came right back with a perfectly played 17th hole and again they were all square with one to go.

Dr. Hughes drove some eight feet past the cup, as Eley's drive found the rough at the right of the green. Eley pitched well on the green, but missed the putt coming back and conceded the hole and match.

Dr. Hughes putted dead to the pin for a par 3, and one over par for the round.

Dr. Hughes had a 35-36-71, with Eley only one stroke back, and that stroke was lost at 18, where he drove into the rough, and where it cost the most—the match and a chance at the title.

Playing the same steady golf which won the medal and beat every one in his way, Dannals battered par rather than his opponent and was three up at the turn. A birdie, a bogey, and four straight holes on the back nine soon closed out the match, 5-3. Dannals was one over par when the match ended.

BIG APARTMENT PEACHTREE CORNER SOLD TO TAYLOR

Blackstone Apartments, With 30 Units, Sold by Black Estate.

The beautiful, 30-unit apartment house on a large lot at the northeast corner of Peachtree and Fourth streets, known as the Blackstone apartments, 749 Peachtree street, has been sold. Jerry H. Taylor was the purchaser. The seller was the Black Realty Improvement Company.

The property is assessed at $85,000. Although no consideration was announced, it is understood that the price was in excess of the assessment.

$15,000 CASH PAID FOR PRETTY HOME

Adams-Cates Reports Sale of Peachtree Home and Big Warehouse.

A fine home and a warehouse were sold last week by Adams-Cates Company, realtors. The home, 2662 Peachtree road, was sold by Mrs. Clark Howell Jr., to Mrs. Lillian C. Welling for $15,000 cash. This beautiful two-story colonial home occupies a lot 100x400 feet on Peachtree road near Wesley. It contains a large living room, music room, four bedrooms, three and one-half baths, two sleeping porches, a three-car garage with servants quarters overhead, and the lot has been beautifully landscaped. The new purchaser has already taken possession of the home. The sale was handled by N. J. Wooding Jr.

Woodward Investment Company sold to J. C. Brown the one-story warehouse building located at 731 Glenn street. The land fronts 54 feet on Glenn street and runs back for over 250 feet, is served by a spur track from the Central of Georgia railway and the property is improved with a one-story warehouse containing about 15,000 square feet of floor space; the building is sprinkled. After some remodeling, it will be occupied by the Brown Distributing Company. Purchase price of $14,000 was paid in cash, and Harry W. Dews was the salesman handling this transaction.

Apartment and Pretty Homes in Week's Transfers

This beautiful 30-unit apartment, known as the Blackstone Apartments, at northeast corner of Peachtree and Fourth streets, has just been sold by the Black Realty Improvement Company to Jerry H. Taylor. No consideration was announced, but it is understood it sold for considerable in excess of the city assessment of $85,000. L. C. Pitts, of Draper-Owens Company, realtors, handled the negotiations.

Handsome home at 3806 Vermont road, N. W., built by W. R. Jordan and sold by him through Haas & Dodd, realtors, to F. W. Morris. It is two-story combination of brick and stone and shingle construction, with four bedrooms and two baths, and in a price class of $14,000. The negotiations were handled by J. D. Brown, of the realty company.

TWO NEW REALTY BOARDS ORGANIZED

Brunswick and Waycross Latest Cities To Join Ranks of Realtors.

Paul C. Maddox, president of the Georgia Real Estate Association, returned from Macon Friday, where he held during the week a most interesting quarterly meeting of the officers and directors of the organization.

Thirteen Georgia real estate men, scattered throughout various cities of the state, were present, and following a busy business session, reports of a very encouraging nature were made from various directors. One of the most important was from T. H. Hall and L. Domingos, both of Macon, concerning plans for the regular annual state convention, which will meet in Macon December 8 and 9.

"We are planning for the largest and most interesting and constructive meeting we have ever had," said Mr. Maddox. "We are expecting a large delegation from every board in the state."

Reports of the work of officers of the state body showed that real estate boards have recently been instituted at Brunswick and at Waycross, and tentative plans are formed to create a board at Thomasville. In addition, other boards are to be formed in every city in the state large enough to support an organization, according to Mr. Maddox.

William G. Hardeman, president of the Macon board, with a committee, aided in entertaining the visitors.

Officers of the association present besides Mr. Maddox were Mr. Domingos of Macon, vice president; J. L. Calais, of Savannah, treasurer; L. A. Powell, Augusta, secretary, and Arthur S. Harris, of Savannah, executive secretary.

Other realtors present included Mr. Hall, all of Macon.

STEEL CONCERN LOCATES HERE

Steel and Iron Works Leases
Marietta Street Site.

Adding to Atlanta's list of manufacturers has recently come the Paul Steel and Iron Works, formerly of Memphis, Tenn. A building containing several thousand feet of space at 565 Marietta street has recently been leased to the concern through the Chapman-Baldwin Company, realtors, and the steel and iron workers have installed their modern plant and are ready for service to those interested.

The new lessees will occupy about half the length of the ground floor, which extends back to Broad street, and will have a frontage of 29 feet on Peachtree. The site was leased from Asa G. Candler, Inc., through Jesse Draper, president of Draper-Owens Company, realtors.

Extensive remodeling is to be done at an expenditure of perhaps $10,000 or more. All new fixtures and soda fountains and other accessories are to be installed, and the complete space made practically new and attractive.

Marshall & Reynolds—Al. Marshall and Joe Reynolds—known to many thousands of Atlanta smokers and beverage drinkers, have conducted their place at the junction of Peachtree and Broad streets, in the Georgia Savings Bank building, for 21 years. The removal to the new location was made necessary by the continued growth of their business. They expect to be able to move in about September 1.

"We had to have more room," said Joe Reynolds, "but we didn't want to get very far from our present location, where we have been so long. We expect to have one of the prettiest places in the city, and we hope our friends will not fail to remember our new location after September 1."

At the head of the manufacturing works is B. W. DuBose and A. L. Paul, both men of 20 years' experience in steel work of the kind to be manufactured and handled here. This will include all types of burglar guards, fire escapes, iron grills, ornamental iron, etc. Builders, or those needing work of this kind, are invited to visit or get in touch with this new concern.

STATE JOBLESS FUND.

The South Carolina Unemployment Compensation Commission has estimated there will be $74,470,000 in the unemployment trust fund to the credit of this state by July 1.

BANK CLEARINGS TOTAL
$46,800,000 IN ATLANTA

Atlanta bank clearings for the week ending Saturday showed a decrease as compared with totals for the previous week and were far below clearings for the same period in 1937, according to figures made available by the Atlanta

Bank Clearing Association.

Clearings last week totaled $46,

800,000, a decrease of $2,700,000, as compared with the week ending

August 6, the report shows, while a decrease of $6,000,000 is shown in the comparative totals for the week just ended and the same per-

AVERAGE PRICE

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 13.—(P)

The average price of middling cotton today at ten southern spot markets was 1 point lower at 8.26 cents a pound. The average price for the past 30 market days was 8.67 cents a pound.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—(P)

Cotton eased into new low ground for the current movement today under domestic liquidation and Bombyx selling. December sold off from 8.29 to 8.21, closing at the low, with final prices 3 to 4 points net lower.

The market opened 2 to 6 points higher in response to steeper Liverpool cables and on a little trade buying. Demand was slow, however, and prices soon turned reactionary under local selling and commission house liquidation promoted by favorable weather in the south and unsatisfactory cotton goods turnover at slightly easier prices. Bombyx was a consistent seller throughout the session while demand was limited principally to price-fixing on a scale down.

Prices at the close eased to a basis which would make a cotton loan mandatory as prices in southern spot markets followed the New York decline to an average of 8.28.

Cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the close of the week was estimated at 26,000 bales against 14,000 last year and 29,000 two years ago.

COTTON ENDS STEADY IN NEW ORLEANS

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 13.—(P) Additional liquidation and selling on continued favorable weather in most of the held depressed cotton prices following an early advance, but the market failed to break through the lows established yesterday. The close was steady, net one point higher to 2 lower.

Trading was moderately active during the short session but selling began soon after the start and persisted for the remainder of the day. The low prices attracted profit-taking by recent buying but other demand was latent and final prices were at or near the bottom.

Port receipts 12,311; for week 12,311; for season 109,461. Exports 10,976; for week 10,976; for season 40,334. Port stocks 2,408-294. Stock on shipboard at New Orleans, Galveston and Houston 17,867; last year 16,690. Spot sales at southern markets 4,008; last year 4,016.

Brokers' Views

STOCK OPINIONS.
COURTS.—It may be some time before the market reaches its equilibrium, and during this period individual stocks with the best prospects of increasing should, in our opinion, be accumulated.

BER & CO.—We would like to think the market last week was a normal reaction and has about run its course.

FENNER & BEANE—We would regard any near-by technical rally as a selling opportunity.

COTTON OPINIONS.
COURTS.—We continue to advocate short positions unless rains become excessive during the last two weeks in August.

BER & CO.—Pending loan developments we anticipate a trading affair. FENNER & BEANE—The immediate future of interest rates largely upon the terms of the government's forthcoming loan.

BROD BROS. & CO.—Generally there is a growing belief that the loan terms and the weather will dominate the market in the coming week. Liverpool due Monday: October 12, 1938.

GRAN OPINIONS.
COURTS.—We believe the market show an ability to hold current levels in the face of increasing open interest, we are not yet prepared to commit ourselves to a long position, amounting to approximately 10 per cent of investments.

BEAR & CO.—We remain of the opinion that the market will be held to a minimum.

1938 FALL STYLE AND MARKET WEEK OPENS AUGUST 15

More Than 50 Firms to Participate In Exposition Lasting Five Days

Merchants and buyers from throughout the southeast will begin arriving in Atlanta Monday for the seventh semi-annual fall style and market week of the Atlanta Manufacturers and Distributors' Association.

More than 50 member firms, in conjunction with the trade extension division of the Chamber of Commerce, will be hosts to the 3,000 merchants expected from seven southeastern states.

Plans for a gala week of style reviews, entertainment and business have been made by local wholesalers.

Beautiful Atlanta girls will model the latest in women's clothing at style shows which this year will be presented by member firms in their own plants or in downtown hotels. Last fall the style and market week was climaxmed by one style show at Lake-wood park.

This year the style reviews will be given individually and the climax will come Wednesday night at the city auditorium when local wholesalers and manufacturers will be hosts to the visiting merchants at a dance in the city auditorium.

Special entertainment will be provided during the week while floor show will be presented at the dance. Visiting merchants at the dance will draw for several prizes, the grand prize being round-trip cruises to Cuba.

"Atlanta today is the outstanding market in the southeast and can furnish every article needed in the successful operation of a department store," Perryman Little, first vice president of the association, said.

"From member firms in the association visiting merchants can select complete and varied stocks to fill the season's needs with assurance of profit and satisfactory deliveries."

Twice a year merchants throughout the southeast turn eyes toward Atlanta to take a look at the season's styles and to place their orders. Atlanta has become a fashion center, styling and manufacturing the latest trends in women's wear.

The style and market week beginning Monday will continue through Friday. Merchants will return to Atlanta again in the spring for the first half of the 1939 style shows. More than 15,000 invitations have been mailed out for this week's style festival. Officers of the Atlanta Manu-

FESTIVAL PLANNED FOR VISITING BUYERS

Dance Wednesday Night To Climax Market Week.

The gala festival at the city auditorium Wednesday night will climax what is expected to be the most active style and market week the Atlanta wholesale market has ever experienced.

Over 2,000 merchants, their friends and employees are expected to be present.

There will be dancing from 8:30 until 1 o'clock. An entertainment and floor show consisting of 10 acts featuring a selection of some of the finest talent of the radio and stage will be offered for the visitors' approval.

Refreshments will be served throughout the night's entertainment.

Many of the merchants, who will be visiting the newly decorated auditorium for the first time, should be awed by the many improvements which have been taken place since it has been reopened to the public.

ATLANTA MARKET IS STYLE CENTER FOR SOUTHEAST

For 25 Years Buyers' Have Found City 'Good Place To Trade.'

By SEYMOUR LEVINE.

Twenty-five years ago the Atlanta wholesale market was offering free transportation to all merchants who would come to Atlanta to patronize the then minute southeastern style center.

A steadily growing group of 75 concerns offered a wide variety of items from horse collars and coffee roasters to tin and galvanized wear.

At that time they were a plucky band of "peers" and did offer practically any item the average country merchant would stock as a staple article, they were laboring along with quite a few other local markets in other parts of the country against the overwhelming power of the eastern and midwestern market centers.

Then, too, styles were more staple than they are today. Colors and fads were more likely to stay in style all season. Therefore, the merchant could place large orders with the traveling representative of an eastern firm for a supply large enough to last through an entire spring or fall season of merchandise whose competitiveness due to greater source of business as well as raw materials made it prohibitive for the average southern merchant to purchase this same article from his local market. Today merchandise is more seasonal and therefore perishable. Retail stocks are lower than they have been in many years. There is a universal cry for style—competitive in price as well as mode. Delivery is demanded in a hurry.

In Atlanta centers a trade area placing some 15 million people within overnight distance due to its having the geographical benefit of being the terminus of a vast network of rail, air and highway transportation.

A merchant who needs goods is in a position to call or wire Atlanta and have the merchandise ready for sale the next morning.

Times have changed and the method of doing business has changed with them. Atlanta is a modern market of over 900 manufacturing and distributing concerns employing about 12,000 persons and having an annual net sales of over $600 million dollars. Atlanta is now strongly competitive to all other markets catering to the southern trade and not only offers the latest wrinkle from abroad but styles actually created in Atlanta.

September 2 Is Date For Double Wedding.

Reverend and Mrs. John Fairman Preston, of Soonchun, Korea, and of Montreal, N. C., announce the engagement of their daughters, Miriam Wiley, to Kenneth Edson St. Clair, of Appleton, Wis., and Florence Suplith, to Roland Walder Bockhorst, of St. Louis, Mo. Dr. and Mrs. Preston have been for thirty-five years missionaries of the Southern Presbyterian church in Korea and have recently arrived in this country for the marriage of their daughters.

Miriam Preston is a graduate of Agnes Scott College and of Yale University. Mr. St. Clair is the son of Mr. and Mr. Edson W. St. Clair, of Appleton, Wis. He is a graduate of Lawrence College and of the University of Wisconsin. At present he is studying and assisting in the Department of History of the Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

Florence Preston is a graduate of Agnes Scott College and of the University of Tennessee and Mr. Bockhorst is the son of Mrs. Valeria Bockhorst, of St. Louis, Mo. He is a graduate of the School of Architecture of Washington University, St. Louis, where he is now an instructor.

The double wedding will take place in Gaither Chapel, Montreal, N. C., at 5 o'clock, September 2, the anniversary of the parents of the brides-elect. Their father will perform the ceremony, assisted by their cousin, Rev. Samuel S. Wiley.

MEMBERSHIP DRIVE.

Frank Boozer, chairman of the membership committee of the Atlanta Manufacturers' and Distributors' Association, announces that directly after the Fall Style and Market Week festivities a drive will be started for at least 50 new member concerns to augment the present membership of that active group.

They Turn Out the Latest in Women's Styles

Street Apparel Will Be Knee-Length; Costume Jewelry Will Play Important Part When Milady Goes Out for Evening.

The girls are going in for glamour in their evening wear this fall.

There'll be shorter skirts in every type of street dress, but after dark glamour will be the watch word and strapless evening gowns will predominate.

Stylists have proclaimed it a season of glamour and 3,000 merchants arriving tomorrow for the style and market week of the Atlanta Manufacturers and Distributors Association are going to get glamour in large doses.

If the women are going to be in the swing of the latest styles, they are going to have to plan on glamorous clothes after dark, a buyer for a downtown department store said after previewing fall styles here last week.

"The newest chic is subtlety, therefore, covered shoulders with suggestive decolletage for informal dinners and parties are more appealing than bare ones," she said.

"Definitely, it is a season of glamour, and what could be more glamorous than metals, not only of silver and gold but colors and often trimmed in furs—satin, martin and silver fox. And last but not least are laces woven with cellophane or metal threads and completed by the final touch—silver or gold kid gloves."

That proclamation of glamour was followed by a dissertation on the style trends for the fall in general by another buyer for a local department store.

She insists that "too much significance cannot be given the costume type of suit" for the "little woman."

"Skirts are definitely shorter in every type of street dress," she

Girls Go Glamorous in Strapless Gowns

The girls are going glamorous in their after-dark attire this fall. The strapless evening gown Estelle Tucker wears is what stylists say gives the glamour. It's black velvet with a shirred bodice and martini noncrush velvet, and is supposed to make the hearts of the "younger set" beat double time.

Massimo Freccia Is To Conduct Final Stadium Concert Tonight

Susanne Fisher, Lyric Soprano, To Be Guest on Magic Key.

Massimo Freccia, the young Italian conductor whose American debut in Stadium Concerts broadcast over the Columbia network last year aroused exceptional interest, has been re-engaged to direct the final broadcast of the season to be heard over WGST at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

This will complete Columbia's fourth year of exclusive broadcasts from these famous outdoor music events in the Lewisohn Stadium of City College of New York. The program includes:

"Folks' Oaths"; Overture of Weber's "Death and Transfiguration" by Strauss; Seventh Symphony of Beethoven.

MAGIC KEY.

Susanne Fisher, one of the leading lyric sopranos of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and a favorite with opera patrons for her interpretations of the leading roles in "Manon," "La Boheme" and "Madame Butterfly," and Clifford Menz, tenor, will be among the guests to be presented during the Magic Key program to be heard over WAGA at 1 o'clock this afternoon.

Extremes of music, featuring Dr. Frank Black and the Magic Key Orchestra, and Sammy Kaye's

"swing 'n' sway" band, also will be highlights of the broadcast.

THE CHALLENGE

Senator Walter F. George told President Franklin D. Roosevelt, at Barnesville last Thursday, "I accept the challenge." It was immediately following that astounding speech in which the President of the United States attempted to "purge" the senior Georgia senator out of congress, by asking the people of this state to vote, instead for the "100 per cent New Deal candidate," Lawrence S. Camp.

Senator George placed the correct designation upon the President's words when he labeled them a "challenge."

They were a challenge to Senator George. But they were more than that.

They were a challenge to the Democratic voters of Georgia.

They were a challenge to freedom of suffrage.

They were a challenge to the structure of the American form of government.

They were a challenge to the democracy upon which this nation was founded and upon which it has grown great.

Senator George has disagreed with some details of the policies sponsored by the President and his advisers. He was joined, in those disagreements, by many Democrats, both in and out of congress.

He voted against the bill to pack the supreme court of the United States. That bill was defeated.

He voted against the bill to give the President full powers to reorganize the departments of federal government as he saw fit. That bill, too, was defeated.

He voted against the politically inspired and vicious anti-lynching bill. That bill, likewise, went down to defeat.

For these oppositions the President, at Barnesville, told Georgia that he and the senior senator "do not speak the same language."

By the same token, the President and all those others in the senate, sufficient in number to defeat these three measures, "do not speak the same language."

And all those Americans who disapproved those measures, likewise "do not speak the same language."

In the court-packing bill and the reorganization bill the President sought to increase the power of his own, the executive branch of government, at the expense of the judiciary and the legislative.

He sought to create a situation whereby he could place upon the bench of the United States supreme court men who would interpret the constitution to fit his own desires.

Now, by his attempted "purge" of those senators and congressmen who will not, on all occasions and under every circumstance, submit to his dictation, he attempts to gain complete control of the legislative branch.

"It is important that the habits of thinking in a free country should inspire caution in those entrusted with its administration to confine themselves within their respective constitutional spheres, avoiding in the exercise of the powers of one department to encroach upon another."

The quoted paragraph is from the farewell address of George Washington, delivered in September, 1796. An address which set forth the fundamental principles of America and stated in plain terms the conditions for safety for the foundations of the government. An address which is as true, and as applicable today, as it was 142 years ago. Washington further said:

"The spirit of encroachment tends to consolidate the powers of all the departments in one, and thus to create, whatever the form of government, a real despotism. A just estimate of that love of power and proneness to abuse it which predominates in the human heart is sufficient to satisfy us of the truth of this position. . . .

". . . let there be no change by usurpation; for though this in one instance may be the instrument of good, it is the customary weapon by which free governments are destroyed. The precedent must always greatly overbalance in permanent evil any partial or transient benefit which the use can at any time yield."

The words of Washington are particularly applicable to the situation created by President Roosevelt in Georgia, because the most sacred fundamentals of American government are today endangered.

The President has asked for blind commitment of the nation's fate into his hands. He has, in effect, declared that those who do not give 100 per cent faith to his leadership are enemies of the nation and not fit to represent the people.

He has asked the people to yield to him all their prerogative of independent suffrage, by voting under his direction for representatives who are pledged to blind, unswerving obedience to his command.

He seeks, not only a subservient judiciary, but a subservient legislative branch, both bowing to the will of the executive. In the words of Washington, "thus to create . . . a real despotism."

Any government which depends upon the dreams and aspirations of one man alone is no longer a democracy. It is, no matter how noble that man's dreams and aspirations may be, a despotism. And such a rule is no less repugnant to the American system because it is a "smiling despotism."

Thus the challenge flung at Barnesville is not merely a challenge to one man. It is a challenge to the most sacred tenets of America's political faith.

Once again, as many times long past, this state of Georgia becomes a political battleground to decide the fate of the nation.

The issue is plain.

Georgians have been challenged to decide whether they shall retain their independence as voters, or whether they shall wait, before they cast their ballots, for instructions from Washington.

In so deciding, they will likewise make plain whether they wish to be represented by a senator who follows his conscience and his belief in American democracy, or by a senator who abandons his freedom of opinion as he enters the doors of the national capitol.

Senator George has accepted that challenge. So, today, has every true Democrat of the state.

The answer to the challenge will be written at the primary polls on September 14.

NATURE AND CROP CONTROL

Unpredictable nature is pointing a lesson in strong language this year to those who would tamper with natural laws governing the production of crops. Those who have attempted to impose man-made laws have been given an object lesson both in human nature and in the vagaries of insect nature that have beset practical farmers these many years.

Tobacco, for instance, despite the AAA, was thrown into the market at an estimated 125 per cent of normal. Acreage reductions meant more intensive farming, better yields and higher grades. The same regulations brought into the production of the crop farmers who never before had grown tobacco. The result has been seen in a flood of restraining orders against imposition of quota penalties and a practical rebellion of growers in a section where crop control was notoriously without appeal to the practical farmers these many years.

Now, a south-wide survey of cotton condition reveals that inroads of the boll weevil and heavy rains have severely damaged the crop and that production this year will fall far under the estimates of the AAA. To be sure, there is an enormous carryover of the lint, part of which will be absorbed if the crop failures this year are of the extent now indicated. But there is no guarantee that next year and the next year the crop will not be ruined by insects or Mother Nature and that within these years a tragic shortage may arise.

This would be particularly more tragic if the same thing came in the corn and wheat belts. Seven-year famines have been known. No less an authority than the Bible tells of these long famines. An ever-normal granary can easily become subnormal under conditions of this kind.

And whether or not farmers receive higher prices in one year, which has not been the case under the AAA, it must be considered that their condition has not been helped if in the next year crop failures prevent their realizing any money at all from their labors. Of course, planners would provide a WPA category for these stricken people. But the WPA itself cannot exist if the goods from which it basically draws its advances are not produced.

Nature has its whimsies; but man has not yet proved himself less whimsical.

With probes in progress all over Washington, how about one of those subway ceremonies when two digging parties meet?

"When appointed, Franco was the youngest general in Spain's army." It's nice that he and that final victory can grow old together.

A patent covering the use of soap in baking is issued, and little boys who say naughty words will have their mouths stuffed with cake.

"Three one-armed men are candidates for tax collector in Arkansas." Citizens, if this is a trend, let it be encouraged.

Incident: Any unfortunate border affair that needn't have occurred if troops had not been dispatched to prevent it.

Out of our own dear experience, we can sympathize with a Britain too proud to fight until it has the brass knuckles adjusted.

A war debtor speaks of paying us if we can lend her the money. She appreciates the milk of human kindness, and would like five cents back on the bottle.

The spirit of encroachment tends to consolidate the powers of all the departments in one, and thus to create, whatever the form of government, a real despotism. A just estimate of that love of power and proneness to abuse it which predominates in the human heart is sufficient to satisfy us of the truth of this position. . . .

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

CONSPICUOUS VIOLENCE

If you chanced to be in Atlanta yesterday, and saw a man run who he was, he would be a partisan of Senator Walter F. George, whom the President unkindly compared to Senator Fred Hale, of Maine. And if you saw another man snapping his red galluses and chattering with rage, you could be pretty sure who he was, too. He would be a partisan of Gene Talmadge, whom the President somewhat euphemistically described as no great addition to an intelligent government.

Above all, if you saw a man blanched and quaking with terror, you could be absolutely certain who he was. He would be one of the federal officials who have been supporting George.

The truth is that no one here, least of all the White House candidate, United States Attorney Lawrence Camp, had an inkling how strongly the President would speak out Thursday. He marched into the Georgia senatorial primary with the conspicuous violence of a Zulu raiding party.

It remains to be seen whether he has destroyed his enemies or merely paralyzed them with fright. For the present it can only be said that the effect was volcanic.

CAMP'S CHANCES

It is difficult to assess the possible results of the President's Georgian eruption. The intended beneficiary, Lawrence Camp, is an intelligent, likeable and rather high-minded person. His career has been that of any other successful small-town lawyer, with a twist given it by his ardent support of the New Deal. His devotion to the New Deal earned him his present post as United States attorney here and, if anything does, his devotion to the New Deal will carry him to the senate. Although he has a firm grip on the President's coattails, he is no ordinary coattail rider, but a convinced and well-grounded liberal. If he is to win, three things must happen.

First, the federal officeholders must be swung into line. In this state, for a wonder, the WPA appears to be strictly nonpolitical. The local machines—the county courthouse gangs—are virtually owned by the power interests, and they are supporting George. But the run-of-the-mine federal officials have considerable influence. They can be smoked out from their places in the George camp, and they probably will be. C. H. Foreman, new Georgia director of the National Economic Council, is expected to supervise the smoking out.

Second, labor must be induced to give full support to Camp. Because of the AFL-CIO row, this may be difficult, but the Camp men hope it can be managed.

And, third, the farmers must be won over. Production quotas have embittered the tobacco farmers and confused the cotton farmers, making them easy marks for Talmadge's brash demagogery.

The farmers are pro-Roosevelt, however, and the President's unexpected attack on Talmadge, who had hoped to benefit by a denunciation of George alone, may have considerable effect. There is also the chance that Henry Wallace, having enraged the farmers with his production quotas, will mollify them with big crop loans. That would make a much easier road for Camp to travel.

THE NEW AGGRESSION

So much for the possibilities. They are only possibilities. While George has been much damaged, and Talmadge seriously bruised by the President's speech, it can't be said that Camp has been put ahead of either of them. One fact, indeed, sticks out of the situation like a sore thumb. That fact is the vast risk taken by the President, who has engaged his whole prestige in an exceedingly chancy business.

The President's willingness to take so great a risk can only mean that his mood has changed again. Early in the spring, and until he set off westward, he was ready to give and ask no quarter. Then, as he crossed the continent, he softened visibly, until his friends and enemies both concluded that he would abandon his purge of the democracy. And now the purge is on again. It's hard to understand why it was interrupted, but, nevertheless, it is on. It is foolish to try to predict the President's actions. But now once more, it seems fairly certain that whatever he does, it will be aggressive.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

Someone said that life's a race
That must be run alone,
But when race's deepest woes I face,

I hold to you, my own.

For two by two the race is run
When faith can point the way,
For love and faith are ever one
Upon the darkest day.

The Topic—

Many years ago, when I was but a callow youth, not far past my first experience with a razor, there was a society of which I was a member. It was a literary and debating society, and we met twice a month, to stage debates or hear papers read by one or other of our members.

There was a friend—one of my closest—who belonged to that same society. And it fell to my lot, as program secretary, to inform him he was chosen to read a paper at the next meeting and to ask what his subject would be. After a little thought he replied he would write, and read, upon "Opinion."

And the subject made me wonder. I wondered what he could find in such an abstract topic to write a 30-minute essay about. And my wonder grew more intense until the night of the meeting.

Then I heard an essay read which has always stuck in my memory as one of the finest it was ever my fortune to hear.

I think it was from that hour that a new conception of the functions of human thought came to me.

Of course, I've forgotten what that essay said. It is so long ago. It is only the effect of it, upon me, that I remember.

However,

Thinking Aloud—

However, taking "Opinion" as our topic this morning, did you ever realize what an essential part it plays in our daily life?

Without opinion of his own, man is nothing but an animal. It is the ability to form an intelligent opinion that lifts man out of the lower orders of the animal kingdom and makes him ruler of his own little earth.

Pause, here, and think of those poor creatures in the semblance of men who have never developed the ability to form opinions for themselves. Who, many of them, have no opinions at all or, if they have, have only adopted the opinions of others as theirs.

No wonder they call that mass "the herd."

Everything man has ever done is the result of a formed opinion. He learned the use of fire because, in his opinion, it was a desirable servant, the flame. He learned to defend his family and his home because, in his opinion, the cave he occupied was a superior and desirable place and, in his opinion, his wives and children were more desirable than other women and children.

Opinion Forms Democracy.

The right to opinion of our own, and the expression thereof, is the essential difference between democracy and dictatorship, totalitarianism.

Under dictator rule, the state must always be supreme. All subjects can have but one, mass opinion, that imposed upon them for the good of the state.

Under democracy each man's opinion is free, he may form it as

Some Lessons of WAR.
It has been 24 years this August since the World War broke a surprised world. I say surprised because ever may be true, and millions of people have had little thought of any real war for one year. It is

New York Times Prints Record of Senator George

The following editorial, giving the complete record of Senator Walter F. George since the dawn of the New Deal, is taken from the New York Times of Friday:

YES-MEN WANTED.

Because of the light it throws on Mr. Roosevelt's present standards in the matter of what constitutes a good Democrat, it is interesting to look back over the record of Senator Walter F. George, whose candidacy for reelection the President now openly opposes. Mr. George had been a member of the senate for 11 years when the Roosevelt administration took office. His service in the senate had been preceded by a distinguished career as a judge of the court of appeals and an associate justice of the supreme court of Georgia. The New Deal began in Washington on March 4, 1933. There follows a record of Senator George's action regarding the chief measures subsequently sponsored by the President:

Mr. George voted for the emergency banking act, with the aid of which the President resolved the financial crisis of 1933. He voted for NRA. He voted for AAA. He voted for TVA. He voted for the President's first relief bill. He supported the President's plan to abrogate the gold clause. He supported the President's first (and last) great economic drive, and voted for the short-lived economy act of 1933.

There was no major issue at stake in this first session of the first New Deal congress on which Senator George failed to give his support to the administration.

Mr. George voted for the gold reserve act, which gave the President the enormous and wholly personal power of control which he still has over the currency of the United States. He voted for the administration's silver bill. He voted for its naval building bill. He voted for its emergency air mail bill. He announced his support of its sugar bill. He voted for the Bankhead cotton act, which established for the first time the principle of compulsory crop control. He voted for the act under which SEC now regulates the stock exchanges of the country. He voted for the reciprocal tariff act, under which Secretary Hull is now negotiating his trade treaties.

He failed to follow the administration only when, in company with a large number of other Democrats, he voted to override the principle of national loyalty which is necessary to the peace of nations. The social political conditions which make this lie a possibility must be changed. There presses the conscience and the innocence of a Christian civilization the truth that a few people have the right to think and decide all the people. Today, 24 years since the terrible tragedy of 1914, the peace and the very existence of civilization once again are in the mercy of dictators and chieftains.

Democracy and Peace. It is here that the cause of democracy is revealed as the cause of democracy. Once again we insist that it is not here that universal democracy necessarily brings universal peace. However, there can never be any permanent Christian peace until there is an opportunity for all the nations to exchange with authority their concord and convictions. At least, that day has come, the Christian program for peace has not yet tested its final test.

Perhaps our first task is to be known to each other the likes of different races and nations. We may well begin in our country. So long as foreigners can be thought of as daggers coolies, waps and sheenies, it is easy to think of them as enemies.

In some way the different peoples of the earth must be brought to see each other as fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters. These faces with have been seen as strange and alien to be revealed in terms of human relations. It would be difficult if not impossible to fight for them and husbands and sons. In order to fight battles it has always been necessary to designate them by their names and disguise them under menacing forms.

This is the significance of the military uniform. The usual appeal of work-a-day life is too insistently associated with the daily and homely relationships of men. So when governments would have men fight, they must as far as possible depersonalize them, must dissociate them from daily duties of peace, and by their uniforms rob them of their individuality. It would be difficult indeed to get men to kill other in overalls and business suits. In a word, in order to make men fight, you must destroy their consciousness of kinship.

Burial of Brotherhood. This after all is the most dead-influence of the military spirit. In the dead shot on the battlefield, we bury so much of the old friendships. When we sever those subtle spiritual sympathies which link men of different creeds in mutual effort for the welfare of the world, we dig a grave for the larger enterprises which for their accomplishment the operation of the best of all the human family. More pathetic than funeral dirges, whose music rhythmic with the rifle fire that terrible war, was the spectacle of the burial of brotherhood, between scientists, artists and philosophers.

That consciousness of kinship found its vital expression in common work for humanity and was buried within the closed confines of a conception of nationality, which is alien to the brotherhood of men. Here Christianity and militarism join in irreconcilable conflict. The problem of Jesus seeks to gather the sons of the world within the fold of the Christ consciousness' brotherhood. For here only will be found universal and permanent peace.

Simon Bolivar.

Simon Bolivar, when only 28, led the war of independence of Venezuela in 1811, first of the many colonies in America to throw off the yoke successfully. He was to lead successful risings for independence in Colombia, Ecuador and Peru, and to inspire Argentina and other countries to revolt.

Prominent Atlantans Sail This Month for Sojourn in British Isles

Genial Socialites Will Meet In Historic London During Trip

By Sally Forth.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT F. MADDOX and Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Thornton embark next Tuesday on the S. S. Nieuw Amsterdam for a trip to the British Isles, that leaves their friends green with envy. They will disembark at Plymouth, on the coast of England, and their itinerary includes motor trips through Scotland, Ireland, Wales and gland.

In London, they will be joined by Mr. and Mrs. James D. Robinson and the congenial sextet will enjoy seeing the wonderful sights, visiting historical spots in the largest city in the world. Mr. and Mrs. Robinson have engaged passage on the Queen Mary, which weighs anchor and sails from New York on August 24.

When they turn their faces homeward, the Atlantans will be among socially prominent passengers aboard the Queen Mary, which sails for Liverpool on September 14, on its spectacular voyage across the Atlantic ocean in four days.

Mr. and Mrs. Maddox and Mr. and Mrs. Thornton entrain today for New York city, and will embark on the ocean liner at high noon next Tuesday, to begin their pleasurable voyage to the British Isles.

WHEN Caroline Ridley and Pierre Howard take their nuptial vows at Saint Luke's Episcopal church in the early fall, a romance that had its beginning in summer school will be culminating.

The first time Caroline saw Pierre was in a school play given at Oakhurst Grammar school in Atlanta. He wore a little white suit and Caroline says she met her heart completely at the sight of him.

The young couple has been going dates since 1928, their courtship having been interrupted only when Caroline attended school at G. S. C. W. and Pierre studied law at George Washington Law school.

John F. Ridley, father of the bride-elect, donated to the young couple one of the nicest wedding presents Sally has ever had. He built for them a lovely white house with green blinds on Lamont drive, in Decatur. And Caroline has spent so much time thinking of it that when Pierre asked her what she was planning to wear to a party, she replied, "White, with green blinds."

To Caroline the house is a dream come true. "It even has a stream in the backyard," she claimed, "and that is my idea of an ideal home!"

It is interesting to note that Caroline and Pierre will be married at St. Luke's Episcopal church, where the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Ridley, trod the orange blossom 30 years ago.

WHEN Charlotte Woolford celebrates her 16th birthday on August 21 she will be on the Pacific ocean, aboard the S. S. Lurline, en route to the Hawaiian Islands. This attractive young girl and her sister, Isabelle, leave today with their mother, Mrs. Charlotte B. Woolford, for the west coast, whence they sail on August 19 for the beautiful islands in the Pacific. The trip, in addition to being a wonderful sojourn for the trio, will be in the nature of a birthday present for Charlotte, who will become "a young lady" on August 21. This date falls on a Saturday, and her mother has arranged a grand shipboard birthday party for her elder daughter.

Saturday, which is always a night for parties.

After their stay of one week in the Hawaiian Islands, the trio will return to the States, and to Santa, where Charlotte will unpack her trunks, only to pack them again. She leaves at once to resume her studies at the Maria school near Washington, D. C. Isabelle will enter North Fulton High school here to continue her studies.

COMMITTEES were arranged for the monthly luncheon. The chairmen are Mrs. A. S. Jenkins, October; Mrs. Harry Smith, November; Mrs. W. T. Thomas, December; Mrs. J. A. Bretz, January; Mrs. C. Alverson, February; Mrs. M. E. Thompson, March; Mrs. N. W. Cathcart, April; Mrs. T. H. Johnson, May; Mrs. E. N. Seymour, June.

Other guests present were Mrs. A. T. Akers, president of the Women's Club; Mesdames B. D. Gray, Ed Crawford, Gartrell Webb, of Greensboro, N. C., and Mrs. Inez Oliver.

MISS WILLIE STEWART RAMSEY, OF BRUNSWICK.

BRUNSWICK, Ga., Aug. 13.—Enlisting widespread social interest throughout the state is the announcement of the engagement of Miss Willie Stewart Ramsey to Luie Arthur Wisenbaker Jr., of Lake Park, Ga., made today by Mr. and Mrs. Jack Julian Vickers, of Brunswick, parents of the bride-elect. The wedding takes place in the early fall.

Since her school days Miss Ramsey has enjoyed enviable popularity through her personal charms, social graces and cultural attainments. She is an attractive and prominent member of the social contingent here, and her forebears have been leaders in business and religious circles of south Georgia for generations.

The lovely bride-elect, a graduate of Glynn Academy in Brunswick, and Wesleyan College in Macon, is descended from the well-known Ramsey, Stewart and Vickers families of Brooks and Coffee counties. Her father and mother were the late Emory Eugene Ramsey and Willie Barton Stewart, of Brooks county. Mrs. Vickers was formerly Rosa Ramsey, of Quitman, and Mr. Vickers is engaged in the furniture and real estate business in Brunswick. Miss Ramsey is a sister of Mrs. Andrew T. McAlister, of Macon; Miss Jacqueline Vickers of Brunswick, and Mrs. Madison Pounds Jr., and Mrs. Ralph Musgrave, of Palatka, Fla.

Mr. Wisenbaker is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Luie Arthur Wisenbaker, of Lake Park, Ga. His family is prominently connected with agricultural and business interests in Georgia, and his parents own a plantation at Lake Park. Mrs. Wisenbaker was formerly Miss Ruth Ella Hall, who is descended from pioneer settlers

Newly Appointed Publicity Women Should Read Miss Winner's Book

Newly appointed publicity chairmen can reap great benefit from the book written by Miss Vella A. Winner, of Washington, D. C., publicity director for General Federation of Women's Clubs and editor of The Clubwoman, official organ of the federation. Under the title, "What Makes You Think So?", Miss Winner writes in a direct style and sets forth to the reader simple rules in journalism to those interested in club reporting. The book will be published in the fall. The author saw the great need of such a book, and has had unusual experience in handling club notices. Some could not be used either because they reached the editor too long after the event happened, or because the articles had no real news value. Through holding office in a club, she watched the efforts of organizations to handle publicity and learned the difficulties from a club standpoint.

Miss Winner is editor of the club department of the Portland (Ore.) Journal and is well equipped to compile an organized textbook on club publicity.

Vital Appointment.

The publicity chairmanship is one of the most vital appointments made by the club president. It is imperative that the chairman be well qualified for the work, possess enthusiasm and ability for the job.

Upon her devolves the task of writing a newsy account of club activities in well-rounded handwriting. Double-spaced and type-written articles are much preferred, and the news should be written in the first paragraph. For instance, if officers are elected, this is news and deserves top place, instead of the last place in the article. The publicity chairman should avoid copying the minutes of the club secretary, because her account of the meeting is written in routine form. The secretary has to handle the account in that manner because the office calls for it to be written in the order of the program of the meeting. The president can usually spot the woman who gives promise of being a good publicity chairman and displays a talent for knowing and writing news.

Announcement of the forthcoming publication of the book was made by Miss Winner at the triennial convention of the federation recently held in Kansas City. Although it is not a federation publication, it will have the mark of authority on it, coming from the pen, or rather the typewriter, of the national director of publicity for the largest organization of women in the world. She has had letters from all parts of the country regarding it and expects to

Parliamentary Law Pointers Are Given On Club Page Today

Committees may be appointed by the chair, by ballot, or by a voice vote of the members, but no committee can be appointed without authorization from the assembly. Authority may be given in the by-laws, or by a motion providing for a committee.

The by-laws or rules of every organization should provide the manner of appointing standing committees, designate the number of members of which each must consist, and define their duties.

Standing committees are those which are appointed for a certain period of time for the performance of certain duties specified in advance, as finance committee, credential committee, etc. Though the name may imply the duty of such committees, it is necessary that these be clearly stated to obviate any misunderstanding.

Special committees are those whose duties are temporary in character. To provide for the appointment of a special committee, a motion should first be made that a committee be appointed for a purpose named in the motion, or that a pending motion be referred to a committee. The number composing the committee should next be determined, and then the manner of appointment.

One motion can include all of these steps, but it is best to vote first upon the motion that a committee be appointed for the reason that if this motion is decided in the negative, there will be no occasion for considering other details. If power is given the presiding officer to make the appointment she may appoint the committee at once or she may say, "The chair will appoint the committee later." If the committee is not appointed until the close of the session, the secretary should be informed and should enter their names in the record.

The secretary should be perfectly familiar with all the by-laws and be able to furnish committees with information necessary to deal with the subject to be considered. In almost all organizations there are six outstanding committees: Advisory, executive, finance, membership, program and house. The formation of efficient committees and the preservation of peace and harmony in the entire membership are tasks requiring great tact and skill, and personnel should be selected with reference to qualifications to deal with the subject to be considered.

A recent appointment to the executive board of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs is Mrs. Frank David, of Columbus, who is chairman of child welfare. Along with many other duties, Mrs. David is one of the three women serving on the State Board of Education.

The touring "Ghastlons" had seven days in Paris, being among those present to witness the arrival of the King and Queen of England. Their further itinerary includes Germany, Switzerland and Italy.

The common custom is for a newly elected president of an organization to appoint all of the standing committees. This custom, as Roberts points out, "gives the president much power but not too much." Having been selected by a majority vote of the assembly, if the president has a policy to carry out, it seems right that she should have the appointment of the committees on whose aid and co-operation she must rely.

However, if, as sometimes happens, two parties or factions exist, both parties should have representation on committees. The ideal president has a dignified, courteous, and absolutely impartial bearing at all times, and always a thorough knowledge of parliamentary law which are governing rules that are a necessity.

Columbus Club Rooms Reopened

Mrs. J. R. Youmans was chairman of the party given last week to reopen the Columbus Woman's Club and members of the governing board were hostesses with Mrs. Youmans. Guests played bridge and carnival games, and conversed with friends.

The club was closed for six weeks while the renovation was in progress. The upstairs room, formerly called the green room, has been refinished by Edward Shorter in memory of his mother, and will be known hereafter as the Elizabeth Shorter room.

The walls have been papered, indirect lighting has been installed, Venetian blinds and new covers for the chairs have been added to make it an attractive gathering place for women.

Improvements have been made in the halls, the dining room and in the kitchen. The kitchen has been enlarged, painted green and white, has new curtains and a new gas range.

Under the Cherokee Rose

By Rose Marie

Mrs. Albert M. Hill, president of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, attended farm and home week in Athens which is sponsored annually by the University of Georgia, and took part in the discussions of agricultural workers, teachers and interested citizens. Mrs. Hill has been directing the operation of a canning plant on her own plantation and with Mr. Hill, is a practical farmer. Standardization is the objective, and a sale is made of all canned products coming up to requirements.

On Thursday Mrs. Hill with the heads of other organizations served as hosts at a tea in Athens given in compliment of the visitors by Miss Lurline Collier, state home demonstration agent.

Building around "Meeting the Challenge of the New Day" the program of the administration of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs will be varied to meet the projects of the departments of work of the General Federation around which federation revolves.

The first official meeting of the autumn is the session of the executive board which will be held on October 6 at the Henry Grady hotel in Atlanta.

In August the last of the 1937-38 inventory series of the Georgia fact-finding movement was distributed and each club president received a copy of the excellent report on "Religious, civic and social forces in Georgia." This was the 12th subject which has been advanced over the period of a year and, with the others, should be a part of the study program of every club. Organizations forwarding this movement have been faithful and generous; contributors have presented authentic facts that are a challenge to every citizen. Write the committee what you would like the future of the movement to be.

A recent appointment to the executive board of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs is Mrs. Frank David, of Columbus, who is chairman of child welfare. Along with many other duties, Mrs. David is one of the three women serving on the State Board of Education.

The touring "Ghastlons" had seven days in Paris, being among those present to witness the arrival of the King and Queen of England. Their further itinerary includes Germany, Switzerland and Italy.

Mrs. T. F. Harden and Mrs. C. A. Pittman, of Commerce, called at state headquarters this week. Mrs. Harden is preparing to take the leadership of Commerce Women.

Mrs. E. M. Bailey, of Acworth, first vice president of Georgia Federation, is on a four-week Alaskan-Canadian tour and is accompanied by her niece, Mrs. Stillwell Robison, of Atlanta.

Summer Notes From Tallulah School Are of Interest Today

Tallulah Falls school cannot be convinced that 13 is an unlucky number just at this time, for exactly that count of seniors or juniors have been successfully parted from their defective tonsils and adenoids during the summer season by that splendid friend of the mountain girls and boys at Tallulah—Dr. Stewart Brown, of Royston. More than 150 Tallulah students have been equipped for life and its activities by this remedial work of Dr. Brown and the present toll of 13 fine, up-standing girls adds a splendid chapter to this great story. All through the year Dr. Brown handles these groups who are sent over in the school car and kept at his hospital during the operation until quite able to leave and never a thing to pay except love and gratitude, which belongs to this good friend for always.

Junior clubs of Georgia Federation may well be proud of their tribute to this beloved physician in the form of the Stewart-Brown perpetual scholarship, which is now well on the way to its second thousand dollars.

Hosts of visitors as usual have visited the school this summer and not one has failed to express the greatest admiration for the work being done there. They have practically cleared out the gift shop for everybody naturally wants to take some Tallulah crafts back home. Mrs. M. Shepherd, of Madison, and Mrs. Malone, of Alabama, have been guests for some days with Mrs. Fitzpatrick. Of course the group which came up from the club institute in July created the greatest interest, for among our own Georgia women of distinction were the conspicuous figures of Mrs. Houghton, of Iowa, who conducted so successfully the sixteenth club institute at the university, and Mrs. Wells, of Dayton, president of the Florida federation, who was an honored guest of this occasion.

Mrs. Wells was greeted with special cordiality by many Georgia women who cherish her as the daughter of Mrs. Alexander B. White, of Tennessee, always remembered as one of the ablest of the president-generals of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. Mrs. Albert Hill, president of the Georgia Federation Women's Clubs and Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, newly elected secretary of the General Federation of Clubs, escorted the out-of-state visitors to Tallulah, while Mrs. Willis Westmoreland, Mrs. Katherine Conner, of Atlanta, assisted Mrs. Fitzpatrick in receiving the galaxy of notables. Although the whole school was seen thoroughly, these clubwomen relaxed into real fun and enjoyed to the full such features of entertainment as a moonlight ride upon beautiful Lake Rabun, with a watermelon cutting at its end.

Among the serious educational visitors of the last week were the president, vice president and business manager of a great mountain university, who were accompanied also by one of their trustees. This group was making a four-day tour through mountain schools and colleges of a certain section. They came to Tallulah for luncheon and remained six hours. Each of these visitors wrote most enthusiastically of their visit and mentioned the "Light in the Mountains" as the "high peak" of the entire trip.

One of these school leaders writes: "Rarely have I seen a group of men so completely captivated by any educational program as they were by what greeted them at Tallulah Falls. The beauty of the setting—the fine spirit of the pupils—the variety of the work done—the quiet self-command of the boys and girls themselves—the beautiful southern hospitality shown to visitors—and the unspeakable advantage of these mountain girls and boys of being brought into such intimate contact with the refinement and culture of the leaders there.

This comment is greatly appreciated from two dear friends of the school, and especially the following:

"The memory of our night at Tallulah will long linger in our minds as a picture of loveliness and gentility. My husband is still singing your praises as hostess and premier trainer of young America. I have already given away my crafts purchased to brides here and there—so if the girls have anything else of that pretty tomato shade—let me have it sure."

Clayton Clubwomen Give Stunt Night For Their Project

Clayton Woman's Club members recently sponsored a stunt night program at the auditorium. Proceeds amounting to $56 will be used in helping to finance the project of members, which is the canning and preserving of foods to be used for hot lunches for underprivileged children from out-lying districts, who attend Rabun County High School.

Mrs. L. M. Young, president of the club, introduced the artists on the program, who came from hotel, boarding houses and cottages in Rabun county as follows:

Bleckley house: Headed by Miss Ella Ruth Thompson; Green hotel: Tap dancing by May Jo May; "Woolen" house: Piano solo by Miss Hope Terrell and vocal solo by Miss Jane Earl; York house: Piano selection by John Bowers, and vocal solo by George Weather.

Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs congratulates Garden Club of Georgia on the incoming president, Mrs. Reynolds Flournoy, of Columbus. As a member of the Student's Club Mrs. Flournoy has been most efficient and quoting Mrs. Donald Hastings, retiring president of the Garden Club of Georgia, "I know of no one who is more capable and deserving of your continued co-operation for the even greater advancement of the Garden Club of Georgia than Mrs. Flournoy."

According to Mrs. Flournoy, who was formerly chairman of flower shows, there were this year more beautifully staged and more intelligently judged flower shows than ever before. Monthly flower shows held at Garden Club meetings are fine; they add interest, stimulate horticultural achievement, and help the members learn flower arrangement. The garden pilgrimages for the past two years have been so successful that this annual event is an established project.

Garden division of Clarkston Woman's Club with Mrs. John L. Kilgore, as president, reports as the outstanding achievement planting in clubhouse grounds of three bushels of iris, 100 tulips, 30 shrubs, dogwood, azaleas, vinca, pinks and violets.

Major project of Fairburn Garden Club has been the beautification and upkeep of grounds at entrance of city cemetery, and aiding in placing a marker in Memorial Park to commemorate the unfurling of the first Confederate flag. Mrs. J. T. Robbins is president and there is an enrollment of 50 members.

Mrs. T. F. Harden and Mrs. C. A. Pittman, of Commerce, called at state headquarters this week and is accompanied by her niece, Mrs. Stillwell Robison, of Atlanta.

... these were the most frequent topics of conversation among us during all our journey home.

"As for myself—I have been in the mountain work for almost 20 years. During this time I have seen some wonderful things happen and some marvelous educational developments—but in all these years I have not seen an educational institution that more nearly conforms to my ideals of a secondary school than does Tallulah Falls."

Where Tallulah fits so wonderfully into junior colleges and even senior colleges for the mountain people, is that so few of these colleges find students who have had any basic preparation in the right kind of education and especially are they lacking in Tallulah's strong point of character building. Therefore, Tallulah, which is grammar and high school only, and which has 135 mountain girls and boys living in its school and farm home, where they get all this rounded training for head and hand and heart—serves as the most wonderful feeder for these higher institutions.

The crying need for the training which we give at Tallulah is emphasized in our nation more and more every day. Tallulah must have no shadow of turning in its ideals and practices. Never were all these things so necessary.

And never has the educational world in our own section and others been so alive to the contribution which is being made by this school which is owned and operated by the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

A college man from Indiana, who recently inspected Tallulah Falls school, writes: "Thanks are certainly due from me to the authorities who made it possible for me to observe from a close inside standpoint the workings of what I unhesitatingly pronounce the most unusual and outstanding school in this country. In all my experience it has never been my privilege to encounter an educational institution which remotely resembles it."

This comment is greatly appreciated from two dear friends of the school, and especially the following:

"The memory of our night at Tallulah will long linger in our minds as a picture of loveliness and gentility. My husband is still singing your praises as hostess and premier trainer of young America. I have already given away my crafts purchased to brides here and there—so if the girls have anything else of that pretty tomato shade—let me have it sure."

High Spots Culled From Reports Of General Federation Chairmen

Miniature reports of General Federation past chairmen culled from many fine records include one from Miss Alves Long, chairman of international relations: "Commercial good-will may become the center of the temple of peace. Does it seem absurd in a world where one-third of the population is at war to mention, moral disarmament? Perhaps! But if we succeed in expanding the world trade, becoming each other's customers in a big way, it may be possible we can obtain an international attitude of friendliness and courtesy. . . . Work for disarmament by international agreement."

Mr. Levy, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Levy, of Galveston, Texas,

Miss Caroline Hill Ridley is betrothed to Pierre Howard and the marriage of the popular bride-to-be and groom-elect, takes place in the early autumn. She is the beautiful daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Ridley and Mr. Howard is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Schley Howard. After their marriage, Mr. Howard and his bride will reside in their own attractively furnished home in Decatur.

Pictured above in her tulle bridal robe posed over white satin, is beautiful Mrs. Alfred D. Kennedy Jr., whose marriage was a brilliant event of recent date, and took place in Thomaston, Ga. She is the former Miss Virginia Hightower, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Hightower Jr., and the ceremony was performed in the garden of the Hightower home before a fashionable assemblage of relatives and friends of the bride and groom. Mr. Kennedy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred D. Kennedy, of Atlanta, and at the conclusion of their honeymoon he and his bride will reside here and will be charming acquisitions to the young married contingent of society.

Miss Caroline Hill Ridley Becomes Bride Of Pierre Howard at Autumn Ceremony

OF INTEREST to hosts of friends throughout Georgia is the announcement made today of the engagement of Miss Caroline Hill Ridley and Pierre Howard, whose marriage takes place in the autumn. The lovely and attractive bride-elect is the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Francis Ridley and the sister of Miss Margaret Walker Ridley and John Robert Ridley. Her mother is the former Miss Nellie Dozier, whose parents were Homer Whifford Dozer and Margaret Walker Dozier, and are members of prominent and distinguished and representative pioneer families of Columbus, Ga. Her paternal grandparents were Dr. Robert Berrien Ridley and Emma Leila Hill Ridley, youngest daughter of Senator Benjamin Harvey Hill and Caroline Holt Hill, originally of Athens.

Miss Ridley is a graduate of Atlanta Girls' High school and of Georgia State College for Women at Milledgeville, where she received her bachelor of arts degree, and served for three years as president of her class. She is a member of the Tau Phi sorority and of the "Black Cat Club," an old social organization of Decatur young women. Miss Ridley is a member of St. Luke's Episcopal church.

Mr. Howard is the second son of Mr. and Mrs. William Schley Howard. His mother was Miss Lucia Augusta du Vinage, daughter of Lucia Robson and granddaughter of Dr. and Mrs. John Radcliffe Robson, of Augusta. Her father was Jacques Pierre du Vinage, of Austin, Texas. Mr. Howard's paternal grandmother was Susan Harris, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Raymond Harris, of Savannah. His paternal grandfather was Thomas Coke Howard, son of John Howard, a founder of Wesleyan College and Emory University.

Mr. Howard attended Boys' High school in Atlanta, Emory University, and George Washington University Law School in Washington, D. C. He is a member of the law firm of Howard, Tillery, Howard. He is a member of the Sigma Chi fraternity, the Decatur Elks' Club and the Atlanta Athletic Club. He is a brother of Miss Jacqueline Howard and William Schley Howard Jr. After their marriage, the young couple will take possession of their new home on Lamont drive in Decatur.

Miss Ruthanna Butters, charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Butters, who is a prospective debutante for 1938-39 season. Miss Butters is a graduate of Washington Seminary, and is sojourning at her summer home in Ludington, Mich. Earlier in the summer she visited her sister, Mrs. Wright Paulek, in Little Rock, Ark. Miss Butters is a popular member of the Sigma Delta sorority.

Miss Carolyne Clements, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles McClellan, of Buena Vista, whose betrothal to Dr. Robert Bruce Logue, of Atlanta, is announced today. After their marriage, which will be an even of the early fall, Dr. Logue and his bride will be popular additions to the city's young married ranks. The bride-elect is a sister of Mrs. Leo Brawner, of this city, and is one of Georgia's most attractive belles.

Miss Martha Ewing, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Ewing, of Montclair drive, is listed among the prospective debutantes for the coming year. Since Miss Ewing's graduation from Washington Seminary she has traveled extensively throughout the United States. Miss Ewing belongs to the Pi Beta Phi sorority and is exceedingly popular here.

Mrs. R. L. Cooney Exhibits Branch Of Rare Franklin Tree at Center

Creating unusual interest this week in the Garden Center is a branch of the rare Franklin tree or "Gordonia alata-maha," which is exhibited by Mrs. Robert Cooney. It was John Bartram who discovered this camellia-like shrub in Georgia and named it for his intimate friend, Dr. Benjamin Franklin. Accompanying this display is a lengthy article that gives the unusual history of this tree.

The Garden Center has many interesting photographs of flowers that were taken by garden club members and are on display this month. Each day, additions are being brought in for exhibition. Among entries of this week is a picture taken by Mrs. Russell S. Bellman for Piedmont Garden Club. The subject was an attractive study of a water lily bud.

Hawthorne Garden Club's entry is a bed of "Snow on the Mountain." The picture was taken by Mrs. Jay G. Wood. A beautiful single camellia with its waxy leaves was photographed by Mrs.

Phinney Calhoun, for Peachtree Garden Club.

Mrs. Robert Bryan, of the Boxwood Garden Club, pictured regal lilies, and a single hollyhock, silhouetted against white clouds, was photographed by Mrs. G. F. Willis, of Mimosa Garden Club.

A rose, with buds and foliage, was the photographic choice of Mrs. Julian Robinson for Primrose Garden Club. Recent visitors to the center were Mesdames W. Fred Camp, of Fairburn; G. F. Oliphant, of Macon; W. B. Smith, of Barnesville; Jessie B. Wray, of Spartanburg, S. C.; C. I. Condon, of Montgomery, Ala.; H. H. Word, of Carrollton, and Marguerite Robel, N. Y. C.

The Pool-Hardy bridesmaids were Mrs. J. D. Pool, of Lawrenceville; Miss Frances Jarrett, of Athens; Miss Fannie Lou Hardy, sister of the groom, of Molena, and Miss Ruth Maynard, of Winder.

The Pool-Tuck bridesmaids were: Miss Etta Marion Hinton, of Washington; Miss Elizabeth Tuck, sister of the groom, of Atlanta, and Miss Leila Jordan, of Lumber City.

The matron of honor, the only sister of the bride's mother, Mrs. J. D. Williams, of North Wilkesboro, N. C., wore peach chiffon trimmed with aqua velvet and designed like those worn by the bridesmaids. She carried an arm bouquet of asters and double delphinium tied with brocade ribbon. Miss Wilma Pool, only sister of the brides, entered alone. She was gowned in peach chiffon with aqua velvet and her bouquet was also asters and delphinium. She was the maid of honor for both of her sisters.

ESTABLISHING A THREAT. The moment declarer discovers a jenna coup will be necessary to establish his one-card threat essential to make a squeeze operative, the coup must be made as early as possible in the hand.

(Declarer) counts 12 positive seven spades, one diamond and three clubs. If clubs break 3-3, seven looks ice cold, but with the freakish distribution of 2-1 that hardly seems likely. Safer course is to squeeze, if possible.

Declarer's Problem. What must be the situation to make a squeeze operative? The opponent must be squeezed two suits.

South plays out dummy's diamond ace at once, declarer's hand queen becomes one threat against the outstanding diamond king. His second two-or-more-card lead is necessarily the A K Q 2 clubs.

One opponent is required to lead in four clubs to prevent declarer from cashing dummy's low-ace for the 13th winning trick and also retain the diamond.

Lens and Shutter—Camera News

"Water Tower"—an example of trick photography to achieve an impressionistic effect. This picture of the Emory University water tower was made by Dr. Ted Leigh, of New York city, and the duplicate towers were added to the picture by a process of multiple printing.

If your technique is off and you get a headache over proper exposure, you should take time out to read this column of news about Atlanta camera fans, which is appearing in The Constitution as a regular weekly feature. Sponsored by the Atlanta Camera Club, this column is designed for all amateur photographers. The Atlanta Camera Club itself is an amateur organization composed of 70 candid shot enthusiasts interested in better photography. Whether you know a shutter from a lens you too can join the club and take part in its activities, which include educational lectures, picture competitions and traveling exhibits. All amateur photographs are invited to submit their best candid photographs to the Picture Editor of The Constitution for use in this column each Sunday.

A camera receives its hardest use during vacation days, and a few simple precautions should be observed to get best service from your machine. The salt air and sand of the seashore are a camera's worst enemies and a grain or so of sand can permanently clog the delicate shutter mechanism. Whenever possible, the camera should be kept in a carrying case of some sort with a cap camera. Patch these pinholes before you attempt to use the camera again.

Three camera exhibits of unusual merit were available to interested photographers this past week. Heading the list was a one-man show of G. E. Kidder-Smith, displayed at a downtown department store. Smith's 50 pictures evidenced his interest in architectural material and his views of ancient Rome were of surpassing beauty. Then the camera clubs of Columbia, S. C., and Mobile, Ala., sent visiting exhibits to the Atlanta club, and members inspected these prints at the August meeting. Over 150 pictures of a high standard of quality were included in these exhibits. The Atlanta club's own collection of 25 photographs is at present being sent from state to state and has brought letters of approval from many clubs on its itinerary.

The picture shows an early morning departure of a group of hunters with their horses and dogs, bound for a morning in the field.

Next month's competition has been announced as "Pictures in the Park." Whether you plan to enter your photographs in a contest or not, a convenient park is full of good opportunities for picture-making. Animals in the zoo or a graceful tree reflected in a lake; a monument silhouetted against a cloud-filled sky or lovers holding hands—these all make excellent picture material and are no farther away than your nearest public park.

Care should be taken in pointing the camera directly at the sun for any length of time. Instances have been known where the rays of the sun were focused through the camera lens on the bellows, and a conflagration resulted. If a roll of film shows light streaks on each exposure, it's probable that the bellows has a leak. This can be tested in a dark room with a source of light placed inside the

Miss Helen Virginia Howard To Wed Roy F. Hahn at September Ceremony

BARNESVILLE, Ga., Aug. 13.—The announcement today by Mr. and Mrs. John Howard, of the engagement of their daughter, Helen Virginia, to Roy F. Hahn, of Atlanta, is of interest to a host of friends of the young couple throughout the state.

The lovely bride-to-be is the eldest daughter of her parents, her sisters being Miss Jean Howard, of Atlanta; Mrs. E. H. McCarter, of Rock Hill, S. C., and Miss Ruth Ann Howard, of Barnesville.

Miss Howard's mother is the former Miss Martha Leona Fullerton, of Thomaston, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clay Fullerton. The bride-elect's paternal grandparents are the late Samuel Morgan Howard and Mrs. Howard, of Barnesville, members of families who date back to the 1700's when the original John Howard came over from England.

Miss Howard received her education at Gordon College in Barnesville and Brenau College in Gainesville where she majored in piano and organ. At Brenau she was affiliated with the Tri Delta sorority. Later she took special work at the University of Georgia in Athens and finished a secretariary course at the Washington Secretarial school, Washington, D. C.

Mr. Hahn is the son of the late Mrs. Marie Reagan Hahn, formerly of Lexington, Ky., and Albert G. Hahn, a retired capitalist of Huntington, W. Va.

The groom-elect received his B.
S. degree in mechanical engineering from the University of Kentucky in 1932. He is a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon honorary fraternity.
At present Mr. Hahn is air conditioning engineer of the Advanced Refrigeration Company, of Atlanta.

The wedding of the couple will be an interesting event of Saturday, September 3, taking place at Sacred Heart church in Atlanta.

A series of social affairs is being given in Atlanta, honoring Miss Howard and Mr. Hahn, among which was a dinner-dance given by Frank Jenkins and Mrs. Bert Stotz, a trousseau tea with which Miss Jean Howard will entertain for her sister at their apartment on Peachtree road at an early date;

a dinner party at the Frances Virginia tea room Friday evening at which William Pasley was host; and a bridge-tea and shower to be given Thursday at the home of Mrs. A. C. Warfel, of Peachtree road.

Jimmy's playboy days are over.

Blue glasses are part of a disguise.

Her pet hide-out is a gorgeous little home in Hawaii.

Cafe society sees her very seldom.

THE very shy millionaireess Doris takes movie tests and a startled Park Avenue wonders if at last she is to burst out of hiding and change into a screen glamor gal just like ghostly Greta

YOU pay your money and you take your choice. What is Doris Duke Cromwell, the "wealthiest girl in America", up to? Is she going to follow the social-service career upon which she seemed so definitely launched a few months ago, or is she going to have a post-adolescent fling? Is it going to be resettlement projects or the rhumba, crime control or the cinema, trades unions or tap-dancing? The odds are even, gentlemen, so step up and lay your bets.

Even Doris's intimates in New York's social circles are puzzling over the latest word from Hollywood. A few weeks ago, columnists reported that the Duchess of Somerville, as Doris is sometimes called, had been given a secret screen test by M-G-M. Friends who thought they knew Doris, laughed it off as an inaccuracy, particularly since it was reported that she had taken the tests under an assumed name. But when the report was followed by more circumstantial dispatches and finally a picture of Doris with M-G-M's Edgar Selwyn at a Hollywood party, questions began to fly back and forth.

The interest in Doris's screen tests springs not so much from the fact that a multimillionairess may be flirting with a screen career, but from the fact that such a career would be so far removed from anything in which she has shown an interest heretofore. Was the idea her own, friends are asking, or was she prevailed upon to take the tests?

Aside from her publicity value, Doris has one attribute that the movie moguls avidly seek. She has that slim, almost angular grace that seems to photograph particularly well. At the same time, her unusual height might prove a liability. It would be difficult to find men sufficiently tall to play opposite her. After all, she is but half an inch shorter than the late Rosamond Pinchot, who found her height a serious detriment to a screen career. Indeed, there are many who say that Rosamond's suicide might be traced to her grief over Hollywood's inability to cast her advantageously.

Of course, there remains the possibility—if it is not a probability—that Doris is merely letting off steam. Perhaps she is doing now only those things which other girls do at an earlier age. Nowadays it is the style for half of the fashionable debutantes to seek a Broadway or Hollywood career.

Perhaps Doris is seeking gay compensation for the long years during which her life has been so completely circumspect because of her conspicuous position in the world. It would seem logical to assume that an ebullient spirit is beginning to leaven life that always has been concerned with the stern realities of being the richest girl in the world.

Such a point of view would explain the baffling and contradictory tangents that Doris's life has followed during the last several months. First were the stories of new enchantment with the quiet life of Hawaii. Then came accounts that she had become deeply interested in the resettlement projects so dear to the heart of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. There were photographs and newsreels of Doris and the First Lady visiting some of these projects, talking to the men and women who are trying to re-establish their lives through these economic experiments, examining the products of handicraft or community factory.

To those who knew Doris, these accounts were interesting but not surprising. It was, they said, the sort of thing in which one might expect her to be active.

But scarcely had this concept been digested than came reports of Doris taking tap-dancing lessons from Bill Robinson. There were six private sessions with "Bo-Jangles", the greatest tap artist the world ever has, or probably ever will, know. When they completed, the colored maestro of the heel-and-toe routine grinned and said, "She's good enough to go right on the line in any chorus."

"Dee-Dee's" friends were not prepared for this. It was a bit of a shock—something on the order of a cold plunge after a session in the steam cabinet. But as usual, Doris offered no explanation. Finally her friends shrugged their shoulders and opined that perhaps tap-dancing was just another accomplishment Doris had determined to master—like her agility in Italian or French.

And then the pendulum swung back in the other direction. From Trenton, N. J., came an official statement from the office of Governor Harry Moore. Mrs. James H. R. Cromwell, it said, had been appointed to the Board of Control of the New Jersey Department of Institutions and Agencies. This is the bureau that supervises all of the state charitable and penal institutions.

Doris took her appointment seriously. She visited a number of the institutions and acquainted herself with the responsibilities and problems.

Unlike many of the Society daughters who made their debuts in the late twenties and early thirties, Doris always has been impressed with a sense of her responsibilities. Perhaps because their only child was a daughter, the late James Benjamin Duke, fabulously wealthy founder of the American Tobacco Co., and his wife Nanaline Holt Inman Duke, took particular pains to see that Doris's training was such as would fit her course through the remaining years of adolescence.

There always has existed between Doris and her mother an enviable spirit of happy companionship. On her twenty-first birthday, when Doris came into actual possession of the first of the many millions, she spent the day alone with her mother. She thought it strange when reporters suggested that a celebration of some sort had been expected.

While other girls of her age have succumbed to the hand-kissing and broken-English blandishments of titled foreigners, her name never has been linked romantically with any of the Counts, Dukes or Princes, phony or the real McCoy, who have over-run America since the war.

The world at large probably never will know when Doris first fell in love with Jimmy Cromwell, to whom she was married three years ago. They first met in 1929 when she was a sub-debutante spending the Summer in Bar Harbor. When she made her debut and began to move in adult social circles it was only natural that she should meet the son of Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury and the stepson of the senior partner of J. P. Morgan and Co., at dinners, charity parties, etc.

Chivalrously, Jimmy declares that he fell in love with Doris the moment he saw her. There is little reason to believe that this attachment was seriously reciprocated, however. Jimmy was fifteen years older than Doris; he had just been divorced from the wealthy Detroit motor heiress, Delphine Dodge.

But what is more to the point, Jimmy was definitely the playboy type. He did not have the seriousness of purpose Doris looked for in men.

Possibly Doris realized that Jimmy would settle down. Possibly she saw, beneath his Fun-Loving Rover exterior, the serious side of his nature which was to manifest itself in an interest in economic studies and political problems. At any event, six years were to pass before she and Jimmy were married. During these years Doris had many beaux but never did she show any real interest in any one of them.

When Doris was ready to marry, she did so quietly, without any fan-fare or publicity. The marriage was solemnized in the privacy of her own home and in the presence of the families.

Jimmy Cromwell of today is engaged in translating his interest in economics and politics into action. His playboy days are over; are Doris's about to begin?

It would be incredible to think that Doris Duke Cromwell is about to toss overboard all of the worthwhile, socially important interests she always has supported and worked with. It is easier to believe that her tap-dance lessons, her screen tests and anything else of that nature which she may toy with are for her own amusement. From the safe vantage point of a society matron she is sampling the harmless indulgences denied her as the richest maiden in America.

But should it be that Doris is seriously considering a movie career, her life indicates one sure bet. Any screen career that Doris may embark upon will be modeled after that of Greta Garbo. For like Garbo, Doris can get columns upon columns of publicity by avoiding it!

It's Camp Meeting Time in Georgia

From generation to generation the habit of attending Holbrook Camp Meeting has been handed down. Many of the old-timers have been coming every year since childhood. With rapt attention this group hangs on every word spoken by the minister. Children often sit on the straw-covered ground as the youngster in the foreground is doing.

By AL HAILEY.

Strains of "That Old-Time Religion" will resound in the old-time way from the hills of Cherokee county, starting next Friday. It's camp-meeting time at historic old Holbrook meeting grounds and the "tent holders" this year are celebrating the 100th anniversary of the camp.

For 99 years north Georgia Methodists and Baptists alike have put aside daily routine every third Sunday in August to make the annual pilgrimage to Holbrook meeting grounds above Canton for a week's session of prayer, preaching and hymn singing.

Now they are coming back for the centennial meeting—a new generation of "tent holders," a generation that rides in long, shiny automobiles instead of in the covered wagons of their forebears, but a generation with the same zeal and zest those first "tent holders" had back in 1838.

It all began 100 years ago when Jesse Holbrook, Cherokee county farmer-blacksmith, shod a horse for a man who had more land than he had money. The name of the man whose horse needed new shoes has faded with the years, but the price he is said to have paid for the shoeing stands as a lasting memorial to him, though anonymous he may be. The story is that he gave Farmer Holbrook the 40 acres of land that now bears the latter's name. And that was the story Farmer Holbrook told when he deeded the 40 acres to a "board of trustees and their successors" for use as a camp-meeting ground.

It's that story, along with a series of acts depicting life at early camp meetings, that the present-day "tent holders" are dramatizing this year in the centennial celebration pageant.

But it takes the words of two of the old-timers who, like several others, have been attending the camp meetings since they were carried there in their mothers' arms to give an idea of how they "got religion" in the early days. The two who have watched the changing years are A. W. Holbrook, of 365 Inman street, S. W., and "Uncle Julius" Hendricks, who lives near the camp grounds between Canton and Cumming.

Mr. Holbrook, who is 80 and the grand-nephew

No, they aren't hanging on the wall. This picture was made from a position above one of the long wooden bunks which are built out from the wall and bedded down with straw mattresses. When one person wants to turn he merely calls "spoon," which is a signal for everyone to change position. As many as 15 can sleep in one bunk.

of the farmer-blacksmith Holbrook, thinks the most noticeable changes are that the men and women are not separated today and that the horse and buggy has been supplanted by the automobile. "Uncle Julius" agrees.

"Why I recollect when all you could hear was the braying of the mules and the mooing of the cows tied up back of the tents. I guess the way they run the meeting now is better than it was when I was a boy, but I don't know so much about improvement in anybody's morals. As far as social pleasures go, the present way is better, but we were lots more interested in getting religion in those days," said "Uncle Julius."

On the grounds today are about 30 "tents," as the campers call the wooden cabins in which as many as 40 persons sometimes sleep. The camp meeting actually begins the Friday before the third Sunday in August, but the majority of those who attend arrive on Sunday. Everybody is welcome to attend the camp meetings and eventually almost everybody in the northern section of Georgia attends at least one session.

The tents are sturdily built. In them the "tent holders"—members of the family owning the particular tent—sleep, cook and eat. Today they have refrigerators and stoves, and one of the main events is the midday meal. When cousins, uncles, aunts and other visitors begin dropping in for the night, provision of sleeping quarters is no problem.

In each tent along each side wall is a long wooden bunk built out from the wall to allow the occupants to sleep with head perpendicular to the wall, instead of parallel with the wall. In this way as many as 15 can sleep in one bunk. The bunks are bedded down with straw mattresses and there is a partition between the women's and men's bunks. At last year's camp meeting 37 persons slept in one cabin.

"It's very simple," was the explanation offered by "Uncle Julius" last year. "When you want to turn over, you yell 'spoon' and everybody is supposed to roll over on their other side."

The tents form a half moon on the crest of a hill that looks down a slope covered with massive oaks gnarled with age to the "arbor," where the sermons are preached four times a day—9 to 11 o'clock in the morning, and 3 to 7 o'clock in the afternoon now.

The "arbor" was rebuilt 50 years ago, but retains its original design. It is a square pavilion, open on four sides and shingled with lumber sawed by the neighbors in Forsyth and Cherokee counties. The timbers, unpainted, were hewn out of the forest lands surrounding the grounds. Mr. Holbrook helped saw the lumber used in the present arbor and helped supervise construction of it by members of the congregations attending the meetings. Some of the timbers used in the original arbor and held together with wooden pegs are still good and are used in the present "arbor."

Although the grounds look the same and the "arbor" is in its original place, there's a difference the old-timers will point out, without slightest hesitation. Here's what Mr. Holbrook says:

"They are coming back now in automobiles and

One of the main events at Camp Meeting is the mid-day meal. From the appearance of this table, no one in the Fowler family will go hungry. Note the cook "minding the flies" with her leafy fly brush. Mrs. Fowler has missed only one camp meeting in her life. She was carried in her parents' arms when one year old to "tent" at Holbrook Camp Meeting Grounds.

these new-fangled trailers, but I can remember when they used to sleep in covered wagons. And they had the males on one side of the camp and the females on the other then, too. Back yonder they didn't think about having stoves. They had log fires going all the time and about four families used one fire to cook with. Around the arbor we had a scaffold with pine knots and tallow candles bedded down in dirt, to give us light for night sermons."

Mr. Holbrook said the present generation has given up the sunrise sermons of old, when the tent holders were called to the "arbor" by the blowing of a cow horn.

"That singing we used to do sure would mess up these folks now," Mr. Holbrook added. He explained that the preacher would read an entire hymn, and then "line" the first two lines aloud. A duly appointed "chorister" would ring out the pitch and the congregation would sing the two lines. This procedure was followed throughout the hymn. Sometimes the choristers would get their signals crossed and give the pitch at the same time in different keys, Mr. Holbrook said. All that has changed now. Hymn singing has become more simplified.

100th Anniversary Will Be Celebrated By Holbrook Camp Meeting Next Week

At sundown, men and women would go to opposite sides of the camp for "grove meetings," Mr. Holbrook said. It was at these meetings that conversions occurred right and left, he added, and it was no rare sight to see groups of new converts coming over the hills toward the "arbor" shouting and praying for forgiveness of their sins. The grove meetings, too, have passed on, and congregations today show their religious emotions with more restraint. The old-timers, however, keep a steady stream of "amens" punctuating sermons in the "arbor."

Campers attending now are for the most part descendants of those who attended the first sessions 100 years ago. From generation to generation the habit of attending the Holbrook camp meeting has been handed down. Several of the old-timers have been coming every year since childhood—more than 65 years ago.

It is almost impossible to estimate the number of persons attending the sessions during the week of preaching. Last year it was estimated more than 3,000 attended and a large increase is expected for the centennial, this week. They come in automobiles and stay for the day, returning to farms and city homes during the night, now. Food is plentiful, the grounds are kept clean and the north Georgia breezes blow cool through the shady grounds. Young couples strolling arm-in-arm are more in evidence today, "Uncle Julius" said.

Representatives from each tent meet at the outset of the annual session to form rules and regulations committees, and to plan the curfew laws for the camp. Modern facilities are streamlining the old-time religion, but electricity has not yet reached the camp grounds, and everybody usually gets to bed soon after dark.

Mr. Holbrook pointed out that it's not a strictly Methodist meeting ground but that "everybody's welcome." He said about half of the tent holders are Baptists.

In deeding the property to a board of camp-ground trustees, the farmer-blacksmith set out that lots on the tract should be given to any person desiring to join the congregation, who would build a tent on the grounds for his family. Neighbors who live in the vicinity of the grounds will bring in what lumber they can get from their forests and build the tent if persons wanting to attend the meetings notify them in time, Mr. Holbrook said.

The Rev. Willis M. Jones, presiding elder of the Marietta district of the Methodist church, will be in charge of the religious services this year, and will appoint different pastors to preach during the week.

THE PLANETS—YOUR DAILY GUIDE

By BERNICE DENTON PIERSON.

AUGUST 14—SUNDAY: Sunday activities should move fast and furious to 6:30 p. m. today, and rest, relaxation and cheerfulness should be held in mind and stressed, for there is likely to be more to attend to than you can do with ease. After 6:30 p. m. the reverse is true, when decisions will be hard to reach, and delay or a slowness in attaining your desires will be felt.

AUGUST 15—MONDAY: Previous to 1:27 p. m. is a most favorable period to seek favors, deal with those in superior positions, for finances, for new ideas and contacts that will enable you to better your position. Between 1:27 p. m. and 6:13 p. m. favors a cautious attitude in money matters, and in dealings with people in professional duties. Old ideas, and dealings with older people, especially in works connected with the ground, produce and conservative affairs, may be brought to light during the entire day with unexpected benefits.

AUGUST 16—TUESDAY: The entire day is most favorable for affairs that take a long time to mature, or those things which move more or less in a groove. Affairs which require persistent effort may meet unexpected success, and dealings with older people are likely to be more exciting than you expected.

AUGUST 17—WEDNESDAY: Your business and personal interests are likely to be very active to your benefit today. Business in general should respond actively, and a fine bright start may be made where finances and business are concerned, especially in the hours previous to 5:12 p. m. However, radical ideas, and unusual affairs would best be postponed.

AUGUST 18—THURSDAY: In the early morning hours, much caution should be used in travel, around firearms and steel. Previous to 11:03 a. m., one move after another in rapid succession, all of which are likely to be irritating and disconcerting, are apt to be experienced. This is a time to avoid friction with others, and a most inauspicious time to make new beginning. After 11:03 a. m., use care in dealings with the opposite sex, and actual money dealings with close relatives. Especially women should be handled with care.

AUGUST 19—FRIDAY: The entire day, until 5:42 p. m., does not favor your putting into practice your dreams. Schemes and high hopes may appear as real only to break later. Give your attention to practical and substantial affairs today. After 5:42 p. m. you will find that loved ones, older people, will work with you to promote your interests. This should be a pleasantly active time.

AUGUST 20—SATURDAY: Before 6:12 a. m. favors work that is fast, unusual, travel and dealings with people who are determined. Between 6:12 a. m. and 6:13 p. m., important matters will best be postponed, although there is likely to be a great deal of extravagant spending. After 6:13 p. m. is a favorable period for seeking favors.

Mr. Shearer's shears were sharp, but this time he had different plans for the lamb

"Sheep" liked to think of this little barroom tucked away in a corner of Manhattan's financial district as his own personal bailiwick—his "web".

Immaculately groomed in morning coat and striped trousers, his expensive bowler hat set at just the proper angle on his greying head, "Sheep" appeared to be exactly what he intended to appear to be—a financier.

He was untroubled by the fact that within the pockets of his splendid attire there was contained slightly less than three dollars. Many a day he'd started out with less and wound up with a sizeable fortune in those very same pockets.

For "Sheep" was exactly what his name implied—a shearer of the mundane sheep who swarmed to Wall Street as avidly as their woolly namesakes head for a salt lick.

"Sheep" was a "fleecer"—a one man confidence game.

His stock in trade was his appearance, his glib tongue, a thorough knowledge of the market (which would have stood him in good stead had he ever decided to turn honest), and a pocketful of engraved calling cards.

At a moment's notice "Sheep" could, by deftly flipping open his wallet, produce cards identifying him as a Morgan, a Vanderbilt, a Hutton or a Whitney, although he had to admit the latter had fallen off in "front value" because of some unpleasantness someone else of that name had encountered with the law.

"Sheep" seemed utterly satisfied with the world as he stood sipping a long, non-alcoholic drink. He never touched alcohol, particularly while he was "working".

He remained unruffled when a young man walked into the tavern and before stepping up to the bar hurried over to a news ticker in the corner and hurriedly glanced at the market quotations.

Not a bat of an eye indicated "Sheep's" interest in this young fellow, but to a gentleman of "Sheep's" calling and experience this lad had written all over him in letters a yard high—"s-u-c-k-e-r".

The youth stepped over to the bar and ordered a drink (alcoholic) but before he was served a slight whirr came from the news ticker and the youngster skipped over to glance at the latest stock returns. When he returned to his drink he was smiling.

With the proper finesse—the exact amount of reserve—"Sheep" caught the young man's eye and smiled. The young fellow smiled back, rather sheepishly.

"Int'rested in the market, young man?" boomed "Sheep" in his best professional tone, moving as he spoke to the youth's side.

"Yes, slightly," answered the kid in a bashful, embarrassed manner. "Mohawk Carbide."

"Sheep's" brain did a nimble twist as he swiftly searched himself for the pertinent facts of this particular stock.

"Cheap stock, upstate New York corporation, closed yesterday at 7, one point above a year ago, hadn't changed much more than a point in a year," he ran through his mind. Then aloud:

"That's a pretty nice issue," he said. Motioning to the barkeep to set up drinks for himself and his young friend, "Sheep" continued:

"Dabbled a bit in it myself before I became int'rested in mines."

"Oh, but I'm on the inside of this," the young fellow interrupted. "I met Mr. Harvey Alvord and he was kind enough to—"

The youngster rambled on but "Sheep" wasn't listening very closely.

Harvey Alvord, "Sheep" knew, had been in Europe for six months, would not be back until next Christmas, if then. "Sheep" wondered which of his slick colleagues had assumed Financier Alvord's name temporarily. But it didn't disconcert him in the least—in fact, it pleased him to find that somebody else already had laid the groundwork for the shearing of this particular lamb.

"So Alvord tipped you to Mohawk?" "Sheep" declared.

"Yes," the young man gushed. "I met him in a restaurant yesterday and he let me in on the ground floor. It is going to stay at 7 until the close of the market today and then his syndicate is going to make a big buy after the market closes. They have information that at the opening of the exchange tomorrow Mohawk is going to shoot up to the sky."

"Sheep" was forced to smile inwardly at this "tale", a "tale" he'd told so many hundred times himself that he could easily have recited it in his sleep.

But the young speculator wouldn't give him a chance to get a word in edgewise—he seemed to want to talk to anyone as a release for his suppressed excitement.

"I drew out my bank account—only $197—and I borrowed $200 from the petty cash drawer in the office. I can put it back as soon as I sell my stock and then I'll have enough money so that Bertha and I can get married."

In an instant he had whipped out a snapshot of Bertha.

"Mr. Alvord is to meet me outside at 3:30 and I'm to give him my money. Of course, $397 is chicken-feed to a man like Alvord, but he's taking me in as a matter of friendship. He told me he's buying $250,000 worth of Mohawk himself."

But something was happening within the nimble brain of Mr. "Sheep" Shearer.

Suddenly he placed a restraining hand on the young fellow's arm.

"Listen, son," he said sternly. "You take my advice. Take your money and put it back in your bank, and take that dough back to the office and stick it back where it belongs. Why, you could go to jail for stealing it and then where would you and your sweetheart Bertha be?"

"Sheep" was a shearer of sheep, a one-man confidence game.

"But this can't fail," the kid insisted. "When a man like Mr. Alvord is kind enough to tip me off to something good, how can it fail? I'll have doubled or tripled my money within twenty-four hours and then I can put the $200 back and still have plenty left for Bertha and me to get married on."

"Sheep" thought for a moment. Then he smiled.

"You're right, son," he beamed. "If a man like Alvord gives you a tip, he ought to know what he's talking about. And you would be a smart young lad to follow his advice."

As he spoke "Sheep" took a heavy wallet from his inside pocket and deftly flipped it open.

"When Alvord gives you advice, you take it. So remember—put your money back in the bank, put the money back in the cash box, and you'll end up a much wiser, much happier man."

He handed the startled youngster a card deftly extracted from the wallet and walked out of the bar.

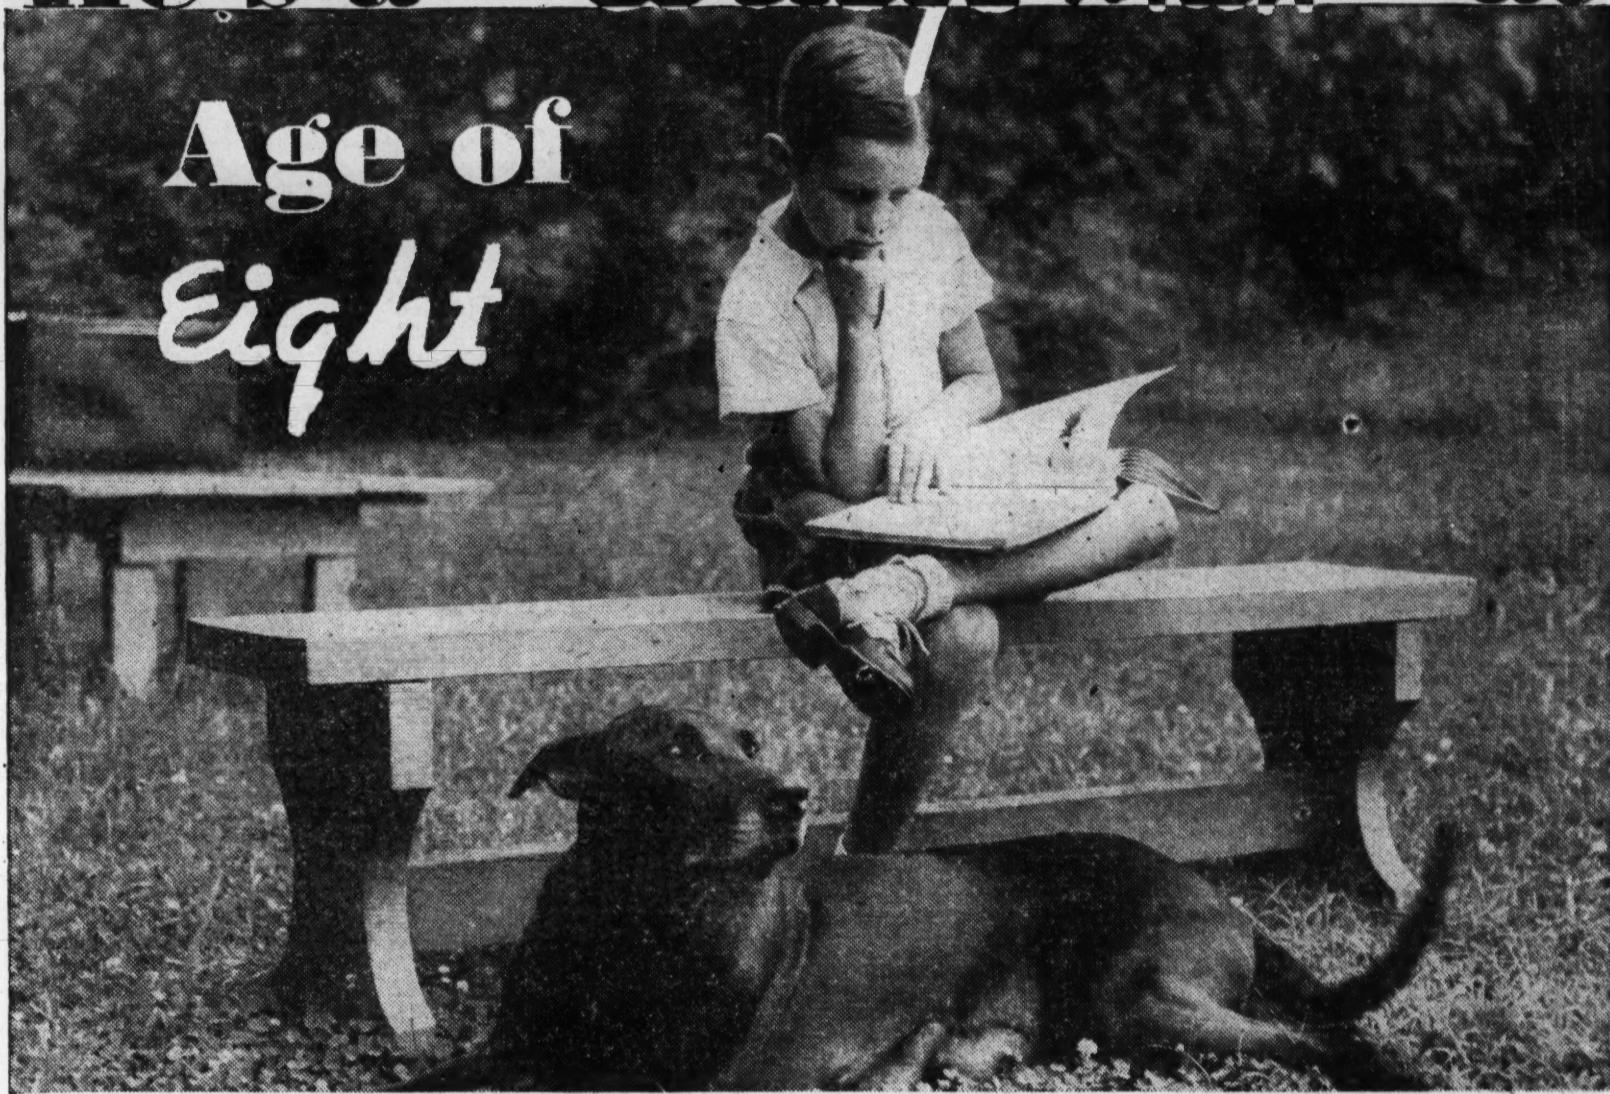

The youth glanced at the engraved card and read:

"Harvey J. Alvord."

A SHORT SHORT STORY BY JACK LAIT

He's a "College Man" at ## Age of Eight

Although only eight years of age, William Collins Matthews Jr. has "attended" two colleges. He prefers the writings of Poe, Longfellow and Byron to Mother Goose Stories, and is a "friend" of the characters of Shakespeare—his fictional heroes.

By ELLEN ST. JOHN BARNWELL.

There is a boy in our town, and he is wonderous wise. Although only eight years old, he has attended two colleges. He is Master William Collins Matthews Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William Collins Matthews, of 1097 Oakdale road, N. E. Not only does he know the ways and means of books but he has been around.

He even had dinner with Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt—entertaining his important date when he was only three years of age and in "college" at Vassar. There's a man for you—the first recorded from Georgia to attend Vassar's College for Women!

But here is the inside story. Master Matthews was enrolled in the summer course of eugenics where he was learning how to live alone—and live. Yes, parents were away across the campus. He was learning the mysteries of getting into his clothes all by himself and in general, to be an independent baby bachelor.

Then it happened one evening when he was at his "supper club," with about eight other self-competent comrades, that the President's wife came to call. Master Matthews was not attired in white tie and tails, but in his informals—little blue and white pajamas. The youngest set, very excited and impressed, chatted gaily with the nation's first lady. Master Matthews' baby talk was so thick with southern accent that Mrs. Roosevelt could not understand him. She drew him close, sat him beside her to hear the lisping Atlantan and made him her "dinner date!"

"It seems Mrs. Roosevelt had come to Vassar to see about enrolling Sistie and Buzie," explained Mrs. Matthews, "but they could not get in. Vassar wanted the situation to be normal and natural for the pupils of the college, and that could not be if the grandchildren of the President were attending. There would always be secret service agents hovering about and constantly photographers and reporters. That would not be a fair environment for the rest of the students."

Poor little celebrities!

Mrs. Matthews, having been a kindergarten teacher for over 15 years, was anxious that her own son should have the best advantages, so she took him to Vassar. At present, Mrs. Matthews is the pre-school chairman for the Fifth District of Georgia Federated Women's Clubs.

"The children's typical day at Vassar began at 6 o'clock," informed Mrs. Matthews. "Then the doctor and nurse would go the rounds of inspection, attending each separate little room where the child had slept all by himself all night. The furniture consisted of a bed, chest of drawers and table. The nurse would show the child which of his clothes she would suggest, then allow him to practice his own power of choice—selecting his clothes."

He laid his clothes out according to rule—on the floor! He was taught to sit on the rug and stick his little legs into his trousers. Since little tots are not adept at balancing, the floor technique is not recommended. Seated on the floor there is nowhere to fall.

The child even learns to be self-reliant about his tooth brush and to eat every mouthful on his plate. Breakfast at 7, sir! But if the child is at all sickly he is not allowed to mingle with the others.

The morning classes of supervised play taught the children to be creative and to get along with others of their own age. A glass of orange juice was served at midmorning. The whole schedule was to develop mentally, physically, emotionally and spiritually, on the theory that all maladjusted adults, or neurotics, were maladjusted children. Science is trying to lay a firm foundation to create sound, self-sufficient adults.

Just before lunch, which was at 12 o'clock, each child went to his room for a short rest period. After lunch he returned for rest, followed by a cup of milk. Then mother could come to visit with him. Next, there was leisure and culture—music and story-telling in the dormitory where all the children gathered. Here cocktails (fruit juice) were the refreshments and the supper club met at 6 o'clock.

William Matthews returned for a second such summer at Vassar when he was four years old and at 7 and 8 he has gone to summer day-time classes of demonstration and project held at Emory University. During his second term at Vassar he did not get a letter for his sweater—they were not giving any—but came off with the honors of having the highest I. Q. (intelligence quota) in all the nursery school. The duration of the course was six months and the student body consisted of 50 pupils who were children from prominent northern families.

Although only eight years old now, he is familiar with the characters of many books. He is a member of the public library and the Book Club. At the head and foot of his specially designed bed, there is a built-in bookcase so that he scans a last chapter just before lights out, and another before the house is awake in the mornings.

He was not permitted to read until he was six years old. Then his mother gave him the readers' adaptability test which consists of a card, showing a black and white silhouette, placed before the child for a few seconds, removed and a plain clear card put before him. "Can you tell where was the picture of the bird, cat, children?" If the child can answer correctly the location of each, he is ready to "take in" what is down in black and white.

The first six weeks after William Matthews learned to read he read 20 children's books! But he was already familiar with the great poets, for his mother tried an experiment.

"Instead of singing to him when he was a baby only six weeks old," said Mrs. Matthews, "I would always read poetry. The rhythm of the poetry would be as effective as song, and by the time he was three months old he would stop crying to the reading as readily as if to music. When he started talking, he had a large vocabulary and frequently he expresses himself poetically."

So Poe, Longfellow and Byron took the place of Mother Goose, and now he prefers Longfellow above all others. He is a "friend" of the characters of Shakespeare, for they have been his fictional heroes.

From his birth on Valentine's Day, 1930, William Collins Matthews has been brought up scientifically. His great-great-great-grandfather was Robert Fulton, and young Matthews has his eyes already on the Hall of Fame. He wants to cut a new niche in it. But right now equipped with a ready sense of humor, a knack for drawing and a developed power of observation, he wants to be—a cartoonist!

Marriage ForbIDDEN!

ARE you over-selling biology and physiology at the expense of romance?

Are young people—many of them modest, idealistic and secretly sentimental even in this hard-boiled age—becoming so frightened, shocked and disgusted by over-emphasized, alarmist sex propaganda that they are shrinking from love and marriage on any terms?

And if this is the situation—indications point to it—hasn't the time come to stop scaring the life out of prospective brides and grooms, to say nothing of prospective fathers and mothers of

eration? After all, there are a few other things to think about and talk about in connection with starry-eyed young love, besides pathology and obstetrics. No one challenges the campaign to eliminate disease, but—enough's enough! Why not let the Summer moon shine for sweethearts, the hauntingly tender music of love-songs fill their ears, without constantly reminding man and maid of what goes on in the clinical laboratory and of what happens in the hospital operating room?

It's certainly not news any longer, and aren't we all getting rather fed up on it, especially the girls and boys?
Look at the record. New York, Illinois,
New Jersey, New Hampshire, Connecticut and a number of other States now have on their statute books a law providing for pre-marital physical examinations, the object of which is to prevent the spread of disease or its transmission to unborn children. These are admirable aims, although some of us find it hard to imagine that—law or no law—the average decent individual would marry if he knew that he risked infection of a woman he loved, or their babies. Is human nature that rotten?

Miss Grace Harden—'I'm in love...we're tired of being treated like test-tubes.'

At any rate, there is now legal protection against the peril. But did the passionate propagandists of compulsory Wassermann tests for brides and grooms realize that they were starting what looks like a marriage strike? If this psychological revolt continues, what will it do to the health and morals of present-day youth? Or to the spirit of romance? Or to the very existence of the next generation?

Take the two great cities of New York and Chicago as illustrations. In the States of New York and Illinois the stringent new legislation, establishing a hook-up between health certificates and marriage licenses, went into effect on July 1. It was the darkest day in the history of the marriage license bureaus. Seven courageous couples applied for licenses in New York—in Chicago, not one! And only one in Chicago on the next day.

Yet on the last day of June the Chicago bureau was swamped with 1,407 applications for permission to wed. During the month of June, in New York, 4,177 pairs of lovers obtained marriage licenses, whereas in July, up to the 25th day of the month, only 387 licenses were issued—as against 1927 for the same period last year.

Now of course your Aunt Selina and the other militant moralists, who always suspect the worst are holding tight lips of condemnation and saying that there probably was a Good Reason —or, rather, a Bad Reason—for this sudden marriage slump. They hint sourly that the candidates for matrimony all had guilty consciences and were scared of applying for the clean bill of health which they knew they couldn't get.

Gather your wild oats while you may,
and your Wassermann tests will come home to roost with positive reactions—or words to that effect. Aunt Selina and her cohorts simply are strengthened in their convictions that All Those Awful Statistics about how many have it are true, that too many modern girls are hussies and their boyfriends dissolute young rakes.

George Jean Nathan ON FROLICAL AL FRESCO

WE HAVE in the last twenty-five years witnessed many changes in the world, but through all the permutations one thing has remained just where it was. I refer to the amusement park. There are many thousands of them spread throughout the land and if anything new has been added to them in the last two decades or more the news hasn't yet been discovered by the roller-coaster unit of the German spy system. It is true that in some of the parks the Love Tunnel has been renamed Cupid's Canal, but when you and your current heart interest scoot around the dark curves in it you will still be confronted by the same old suddenly illuminated wax figures of Daphnis and Chloe and Psyche at the Well and the same old idyllic pastoral scene with the papier mache cow in it.

The pleasure park entrepreneurs, however, are by no means as stupid in this regard as they may superficially seem. They are hep to the fact that the great majority of folk don't much relish changes in their diversions and that what amused them in years past continues to amuse them equally today. People are creatures of habit. If you invade their habits with too much novelty you are likely to confuse them. Think what would happen if men were overnight asked to use round handkerchiefs, or collars that buttoned at the side of the neck, or shirts that had to be pulled on over the feet, or triangular bed pillows, or anything else markedly dissimilar to what they have long been accustomed to.

It is the same with amusement parks. A minor change may be made here and there in the switchback railways, but if they still didn't knock the breath out of people and almost break their necks when they shoot around corners, they'd starve to death. Imagine the financial consequences of suddenly changing the color of frankfurters to green, or of a fortune-teller's alteration of her name from Madame Tzigane to Bessie Jones, or of a merry-go-round organ that played Beethoven, or of a Zulu Village concession that didn't smell something awful.

The routine of the average pleasure park, accordingly, remains wisely immutable from year to year. When you enter one, you can bet your bottom dollar that you will encounter for the thousandth time the hidden electric fan that will blow the skirts of the girls up above their heads, to the theoretical great embarrassment of the sweet ones and the glee of the hundred or so collarless gents who remain rooted to the vantage spot for hours on end; the Ferris wheel that first made its appearance at the Chicago World's Fair in 1893; the butter that will ooze through the paper popcorn bag and send you to the washroom where they'll nick you a nickel to wash it off your hands; and the male midget, immaculately clad in black, who will inevitably be smoking a cigar that would be too big for Jim Farley.

The Wild West show is another venerable standby. I have looked at hundreds of them in my time and they are still exactly what they were in my childhood: the same old pseudo-cowboys in the red and green shirts with bandanas around their necks; the same old blonde belles of the plains in the fringed leather skirts with bandanas around their necks; the same old lethargic Indians squatting at the entrance and smoking long pipes; and, inside, the same old half hour of lasso monkeyshines, picking handkerchiefs off the ground riding at top speed, and Indian war dance.

Other things you can't miss are the Japanese rolling ball game, which will reward you with a doll if you succeed in achieving a score fifty points higher than all the numbers on all the holes added together; the cane ring game, which will reward you with the prize cane in the rack if you succeed in throwing a three-inch wooden ring over its six-inch top; and the baseball-ten pin game, which will reward you with a box of cigars if you succeed in knocking over all ten pins—four of them placed a foot apart—with three balls.

Then there's the shute-the-chutes on the seat

of which the previous occupant has left a gob of soft taffy that sticks to your pants; the Wild Waves ride that bumps you black and blue and gives you a sore neck for two days afterwards; the photograph booth that takes your picture for a dime showing you languishing like a blasé millionaire against a Monte Carlo backdrop; and The Great Mystic Who (according to the placard outside his booth) Can With Equal Ease Foretell The Past And Future.

The Great Mystic, need I remind you, is a card. His chin impressively adorned with a sinister black goatee, his body enveloped in a purple velvet robe embroidered with stars and moons, and his fingernails at least three Satanic inches long, The Great Mystic receives you into his occult parlor, also decorated with stars and moons, with the soft suavity of a combination floor-walker and undertaker. He bids you be seated before a table on which rests a large glass ball which looks like a goldfish bowl upside down and which is illuminated with a greenish-lavender light. In tones that resemble a beer-garden basso gargling absinthe, The Great Mystic now demands your name. "Joe Shaughnessy," you confide to him. His brow wrinkles. He pauses. His voice comes from far-away. "I see," he drones, "a strange country. It is many years ago, how many I cannot say. A man, your father maybe, your grandfather maybe, or maybe it was your great-grandfather, is setting forth for a new land—America. Wait a moment—please—just a moment. I have it. Ireland! You have Irish blood in your veins!"

Having achieved this remarkable feat in divination, The Great Mystic proceeds further to astonish you—that is, if you aren't a fresh guy and tell him your name isn't Joe Shaughnessy at all, but Siegfried Oberfelder, in which case The Great Mystic will smile indulgently upon you, inform you that he can do nothing if you do not collaborate with the Fates, bid you hand him his fee of four bits, and tell you to get the hell out. If, however, you are disposed to follow his behest and collaborate with the Fates by being honestly Joe Shaughnessy, The Great Mystic will give you an added run for your money.

He will gravely admonish you to watch your health if you are to achieve long life. He will predict that some day you will make a long journey. He will detect in you great resources of character and will power. He will reassure you that not often are you swayed by the influence of others. He will thrill you by informing you that someday you will meet your Ideal Love. He will do all that and more. All you, in turn, have to do, as he says, is to collaborate with the Fates, and give him fifty cents.

And now that you've had another wonderful time in the amusement park, you buy a five-cent glass of beer for ten cents and annually keep unsuccessfully swearing off amusement parks for another twenty-five years.

She's crusted with diamonds, her boy friends are gilded, yet Top-Drawer Beauty Gloria Baker gets her biggest thrill from bare-foot shopping tours, far from Broadway

By URSULA PETRIE

RIDING the crest of society's high C's comes Gloria Baker, home from a 'round-the-world-cruise, an appendicitis operation, and an idyl in Hawaii, to take up her place again as America's Ace Enchantress!

Gloria, or "Mimi", which is her mother's name for her, was just eighteen on her last birthday, celebrated on June 6th at Honolulu. But already she has influenced the world of society! And yet this fairy-tale princess, encrusted in diamonds, whose favorite pastime might be guessed as roulette, racing or the rhumba, admits—but actually—that the thing she likes best to do is "go barefoot, be left alone and allowed to act natural!"

Not a very tall order for us, who know life as it is lived out near Three Forks or Burp's Junction, but for La Belle Mimi, who creates a commotion whenever she breaks bread at the 52nd Street high-hat spots, or, with equal ease, break hearts at the Boots and Spur Polo Club (if any), on Long Island, it is well-nigh impossible. That Gloria has discovered for herself. And she doesn't crave it.

The ill-wind which blew Gloria the most good happened to be an appendix operation which held her up in Hawaii for two months. Quite an amazing tour de force from which to learn Object Lesson No. 1. It gave Gloria an opportunity to find that other person which is the real herself—a new, exciting and novel experience. Little wonder then that she rhapsodized:

"I hope to stay here for quite a while," she said at that time. "You see this is one place in the world that I can go where I like and do as I please and no one cares. Why, I even go downtown—down to the markets—shopping in shorts and barefooted, and have a grand time. People let you alone over here and it's so good to be natural!"

People may—but men didn't! First there was a young and popular aviation cadet, one Lt. Weaver, who found Gloria as exciting as the "Barefoot Girl" as Prince Charming found Cinderella with her glass slipper—but apparently more difficult to fit into his personal plans. For soon New York's Bob (Henry) Topping showed up and topped the Lieutenant's most zealous efforts... Big, blond and beaming her persistently in Aloha-land and on her peregrinations from New York to Sands Point to Saratoga—the romance of the tin-plate heir and the triple-threat heartbreaker looked at least as serious as a score of others during the past season.

Perhaps the unusually close bond between Gloria Baker and her mother, Mrs. Margaret Emerson, who so greatly resemble each other, postponed immediate marriage plans, for Mrs.

A Charmer's Charms*

INSTEAD of wearing the popular bracelets of precious stones set into her cherished keepsake, a gold cigarette case that once belonged to her father. There are tiny diamond dogs, a wee drum major, a lion and tiger, ruby lantern for "danger", one little pig with curly tail and bright eye—a fancy pair of "panties".

One charm was a gift from her devoted mother on her sixteenth birthday. Two letters, U and R, in diamonds, rest on a tiny onyx globe with the Americas outlined in gold. Underneath was the number 2, then ME in diamonds. "You are the world to me."

GLAMOR-GIRL'S Holiday

Emerson is devoted to both her daughter and her two sons, half-brothers of Gloria. They are, of course, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, who married the former Manuela Hudson in a surprise wedding this Spring, and George Vanderbilt whose marriage to Lucille Parsons has recently been blessed by the arrival of wee Lucille Margaret.

She loves pets, especially her small dog, "Boocoore," whose comical little puppy face, carefully framed, usurps a position of importance on her dresser. She never poses a la grande dame and, when in Hawaii, wore nothing but slacks and lounging pajamas for daytime wear, some cleverly fashioned to outwit their origin. Although her favorite colors are blue and black, when in Honolulu she went completely native, at least as to coloring, wearing the gayest of hues—the brighter the better—in keeping with the bright spirit of the scene.

But the main bane of her existence is the necessity for endless restrictions because of the millions of eyes always focused in unblinking solemnity in her direction—she, the prima ballerina of the debutantes, the No. 1 tiara threat.

Her other pet aversions are police dogs—and horses. A police dog attacked her once and she can't forget. Her fear of horses is inexplicable. "I feel rather badly about it," she acknowledges. "Oh, I still put on my habit once in a while and climb into the saddle," she admitted, "but I'm scared of the horse and he's scared of me, so I soon climb down again."

Typical of her generosity and her friendliness, if given half a chance, was the incident which occurred one day she had her hair "done" at a Waikiki beauty shoppe. Her private, particular motto might well be "Get Comfortable", and so leaning back in the chair, she propped her feet on the foot rest.

The hairdresser, an attractive young girl, admired Gloria's unusual beach shoes.

"Do you like them?" Gloria asked, delightedly. Then, kicking them off at the feet of the surprised girl, she said, "Try them on!" The girl did; and they fitted perfectly. "Keep them," Gloria said.

Gloria and her mother are actually planning to purchase some property out Diamond Head way in Hawaii, there to build a small home. "I want a little house with a kitchen," she says, "where I can putter around. I'm tired of big places—and, besides, I'm learning to cook and keep house, you know. Every girl should know how."

Perhaps that meant the Topping torch was burning brightly—at both ends of the world—or was it just a futile gesture for freedom? Whatever, Gloria's favorite Hawaiian melody remains Ray Kinney's theme song—"Across the Sea"—which, conceivably, may become the theme song of her own romance!

Novelized History.

A DAY OF BATTLE. By Vincent Sheean. Doubleday, Doran & Co., New York. 304 pp. $2.50.

On May 11, 1745, a battle was fought in what is known in history as the "War of the Spanish Succession" at Fontenoy in Flanders between the French and English during the reign of Louis XV. The English were under command of the Duke of Cumberland, grandson of George the Elector of Hanover (who became George I of England) and of the Electress Sophie who was discarded when it became known to the Elector that she was the mistress of Count Philip von Konigsmarck. This fact becomes interesting because Louis had intrusted the fate of the battle to Marshal Maurice de Saxe, the bastard son of Emperor Augustus II and Aurora Konigsmarck, sister of the lover of the Electress Sophie, who was slain when their indiscretion became known.

Son of an Emperor, but not a prince, Maurice de Saxe had carved out his own destiny as a soldier of fortune, marketing his prowess where it brought the highest reward. Having achieved high rank in the French army his one great desire now was to defeat the English and humiliate Cumberland, as he owed a grudge to the House of Hanover for the murder of his uncle. In addition to the French under his command were several regiments composed of Irish and Scot adherents of the deposed Stuart regime in what are now the British Isles.

The main theme of the story is the novelist's description of the battle, which raged from early morning until nightfall, when the English and their allies were routed and fled from the field of carnage. Woven into the story is that of Mme. Lenormant d'Etioles, whose young husband had been ordered to the south of France that Louis might elevate the beautiful young wife to the rank of his official mistress and install her at Versailles as Mme. la Marquise de Pompadour.

Successful outcome of the battle, in which the Irish and Scots performed valiantly, resulted in Louis aiding an ill-fated expedition that carried Charles Edward Stuart and his adherents to Scotland in the abortive effort to regain the thrones of England and Scotland.

The historic background and prominent individuals involved form the basis for this very interesting piece of fiction.

Who Profits by War?

BLOOD AND STEEL. The Rise of the House of Krupp. By Bernhard Menne. Lee Furman, New York. 424 pp. Illst. $3.

To this American edition of Bernhard Menne's history of the House of Krupp have been restored all the passages deleted, "for reasons of policy," from the English edition. Thus the American reader can understand the wartime dealings between the Krupps and such English firms as Vickers, and the international chicanery of munition makers in general. The authority of Herr Menne, a former Krupp employee, cannot be questioned. He is familiar with much hitherto little known evidence, and furnishes overwhelming documentation for every statement. He dispels the veil of mystery which has long surrounded the foundries of Essen. He explains how it was possible for men of almost unrelieved mediocrity to build a gigantic institution, dominating the world, whose history is the history of Germany industrialism. The Krupps, Herr Menne shows, with example piled on example, have always been notable pickers of other men's brains—just as, figuratively, they have been pickers of other men's bones.

Krupp history began with an ancestor profiteering in land during the plague of 1599. Krupp ethics were demonstrated in 1812, when they dealt with Napoleon against their country. They were demonstrated again in an estimated 800,000,000 marks profit on the World War; in claims for royalties from an English firm for use of patents on shells which killed German soldiers. Boasts of welfare work among employees are demolished when it is shown that in a year when the Krupp fortune increased 20,000,000 marks, only 2,000,000 marks were spent on welfare. There are hundreds of other such details drawn from every war and peace since Napoleon.

In the course of detailed revelation of the position of Krupps with the Nazis, there is related that curious incident of Hitler's visit to Essen for important conferences on the eve of the 1934 blood purge. Before that the House of Krupp had been a little skeptical of National Socialism, but ever since, it has been pledged, in the words of Dr. Gustav Krupp von Bohlen und Halbach, to the service of "our great leader, Adolf Hitler."

To escape charges of high treason based on this book, Herr Menne had to flee from Germany while writing it and finish the work in Prague. He was last heard of in Vienna on the eve of Anschluss.

Timely Book.

THE SELF YOU HAVE TO LIVE WITH. By Finfred Rhoades. J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia. 182 pp. $1.75.

This is a timely book for an age like ours which has lost itself in a deep disquiet. The author writes out of a rich background as a minister, teacher, psychologist and psychiatrist. He features religion as "a powerful aid to successful, courageous living." The chapter topics are: "Creating a Self to Live With," "Learning How to Live," "Turning Unadjustment Into Adjustment," "The Art of Not Worrying," "Relaxation and Power," "It's the Soul that Needs Treatment," "Dealing Honorably With Oneself," "The Task of Life." A careful reading of this interesting volume will help one to live victoriously. It has a special message for those who have permitted their lives to be smothered beneath the incidental. H. L. T.

Roosevelt Foresight.

A NEW DEAL FOR YOUTH. By Betty and Ernest K. Lindley. Viking Press, New York. 315 pp. Illustrated. $3.

Though not a few short-sighted higher-ups, still financially well-heeled, are riding out comfortably the wave of the 1929 depression, would hasten to deny that their unwise business experiments a decade ago were, directly or indirectly, the chief contributing causes of America's youth problem—and, concomitantly, America's crime problem—today, a handful of more liberal higher-ups grant that the welfare of America's youth indeed constitutes a crisis, and have determined to do something—right or wrong—about it.

Chief crusader in the fight to rehabilitate youth is Franklin D. Roosevelt, whose NYA is the least publicized, least criticized, most widely appreciated exploit of the New Deal in America. Realizing, astutely, that the bulk of those youngsters receiving NYA aid would come of voting age during his administration, or, at least in time to constitute an appreciable support to his party, Franklin D. Roosevelt gently wooed the youth of America away from almost utter despair, and to the camp of the "party" with a $50,000,000 allotment for NYA's first fiscal year, later increased succeeding yearly allotments. In doing so he showed not only political foresightedness; he alleviated the painful state of the majority of American youngsters, who had neither tools to occupy their hands nor books and studies to occupy their minds.

In his report on the state of the NYA in its third year, Ernest K. Lindley, follower of Roosevelt and interpreter of the motives of the administration since 1933, adds the support of his wife, writes cheerfully of NYA's great good, presents graphs and tables—and ease histories without number—to substantiate his claim that NYA is doing well. Eloquent as these are, accompanying photographs of busy youngsters, employed and content, speak louder, say more. After all, minds busy at harmony seldom breed discord—which might be the ## Thrilling Adventure.

RIP DARCY, ADVENTURER. By Jack O'Brien. John C. Winston Company, Philadelphia. 358 pp. $2.

Here is something definitely new and thrilling for your growing son—a story of adventure in which the young hero lives and travels with men of adventure known to nearly every red-blooded American youth.

Rip and his dog, Junie, come from the storm-lashed mid-Pacific, rescued from a watery doom by mere chance as the schooner, Repulse, drops anchor to avert disaster on the coral reefs.

Of Rip's ensuing adventures, under the sponsorship of the Adventurers' Club, O'Brien has written a story as thrilling as any to be found in youth's bright world of fiction. Across America and the Pacific, through China and India, to Zululand and British East Africa, South and Central America and the Mexican border goes Rip, always in company with one of those figures known and loved by adventuresome youth. He travels with Bob Ripley, Frank Buck, Philip Plant, Tex O'Reilly, Tex O'Rourke and many others among young America's most glamorous figures.

"Rip Darcy, Adventurer," is a story for your boy—a story of clean adventure, packed with thrills, and combining with them a generous store of education about far places. P. T.

Christianity and War.

WAR AND THE CHRISTIAN. By C. E. Raven. Macmillan Co., New York. 183 pp. $1.75.

In this timely book Charles E. Raven, Regius Professor of Divinity in the University of Cambridge and Canon of Ely, speaks prophetically on war and the Christian conscience. He enlarges upon pertinent historical data—National Council of Social Service, the Lambeth Appeal, the Labor Party, the Communists, Birmingham Conference in 1924, Oxford and Edinburgh Conferences of last summer, etc.—and thus paves the way to discuss is war evil? Is war inevitable? The claims of the state, war and the church, war as the less of two evils, etc.

The thought is logical; the book is convincingly written; few, if any, can find fault with the solid learning and directed verdict. To discuss war from the Christian point of view is of necessity to be driven back "to the basal affirmations of our faith." Both the re-examination and the re-statement of these basal facts are long overdue. The problem of war not only demands solution from the Christian point of view among Christians but it may be just the concrete problem that will enlighten and deepen and unify the thought of the churches with Christendom.

The book makes two points amazingly clear: That war is evil; that "an honest controversy, honestly and generously discussed, can be, as we all know, amazingly clarifying and productive." It is just here that this book will contribute its superb worth in dealing with this crucial problem of war. Its readers should be many.

Conflicts, Loves, Hatred

TAKE MY HEART. By Priscilla Wayne. M. S. Mill Co., Inc., New York. 251 pp. $2.

Is it right or wrong for a girl to propose to the man she loves?

Here is Priscilla Wayne's answer to that question—an engaging story of interlinked angles and of the eternal unsuspecting male.

"Take My Heart" is a story of Beth and Charmion, step-sisters in quest of hearts—straight-playing Beth and the beautiful but brazen cheater, Charmion. Of the warp and woof of their lives and loves, the author has woven a story that is understanding and appealing. It is a story of conflicts, of loves and hatreds—and of disappointments and unfailing hopes. There is beauty between these covers.

Slave Traffic Data.

ISAAC FRANKLIN, Slave Trader and Planter of the Old South. By Wendell Holmes Stephenson. Louisiana State University Press. 368 pp. $3.

This work of historical research contains a short, compact and heavily documented history of the slave traffic, as practised in the period about 1830. The firm of Franklin and Armfield was at one time the largest firm in the slave trade and maintained correspondents and contacts throughout the entire south. But Isaac Franklin, in his dual capacity as slave trader and planter, also serves to illustrate the author's main theme—namely, the question whether the large-scale plantation of the old south, utilizing slave labor, was economically justified. To this end the author has gathered an immense mass of information from the books of the Franklin plantations in Louisiana and the records of West Feliciana Parish.

A painstaking and thorough-going job, historically valuable, but it would seem of scant interest to the casual reader, who will find himself unable to digest its results. The 150 pages of text preceding this mass of data are, however, of a decidedly high order, both as entertainment and as historical information.

LOST AND FOUND. By Priscilla Wayne. John H. Hopkins & Son, Inc., New York. 256 pp. $2.

Priscilla Wayne has already established herself in her previous books as an author of stories that move with speed and snap, that cover the plot in a fast, breath-taking way, and this new story, "Lost and Found" is true to that characteristic of the author.

"Lost and Found" is the right title for this new Priscilla Wayne book, for that is what happens to lovely

CARE OF SHADE TREES

By W. ELBRIDGE FREEBORN.

Each time we stop to think about shade trees we cannot help but bring to mind the very interesting Japanese folk story concerning red and green maples. There grew in Japan a tree of marvelous beauty having red leaves. A poet passed and wrote so ecstatically of the tree that it never changed color again; it knows that the poet will not be there to admire it. All red leaved sorts descended from that tree; the red sorts are constantly arraying themselves in the hope that a passing poet will do them justice in the poems of the future.

Whether or not this story is true, whether or not the other stories that we hear of a great many shade trees are true, we do not know, but we do know that almost every home site is selected largely because of fine old trees that are growing there. Except for the lawn itself, there is probably no one part of the home planting that arouses more admiration and comment from the passer-by than the beautiful trees there. In spite of this fact there is probably less known about the care, fertilization and watering of shade trees than of any other one plant used about the home. It is very fortunate that they are more or less trouble-free for if this were not true a great many of our fine century-old trees would be dead and gone.

Trees are somewhat at a disadvantage in that they are unable to show to the observer that there is any trouble until it is almost too late. A good concrete example of this was shown during the summer of 1926. We all remember the drought that occurred during the summer of 1925 that so devitalized these trees that they were unable to stand the following summer, which was not severe. At the same time they were able to live through the fall, winter and spring of 1925-26.

For two reasons, then, it is necessary for us to occasionally observe our shade trees with a great deal of care and attention. First, because they belong to a proud family and will not show their troubles until forced to do so. Second, because of the fact that it is almost impossible to replace shade trees once they have died. Very few of us can remember the planting of the very fine, magnificent shade trees which we have in and around Atlanta.

In considering the care of shade trees it is well to bear in mind the conditions under which shade trees grow naturally in our forests and woods. There, they live almost undisturbed; nature almost never cultivates the roots of her shade trees. She does prepare a good, rich mulch on top of the soil, which not only feeds the trees constantly, but also holds moisture for their benefit. Except in unusual cases, she allows very little other growth to be fighting with the trees for the food that is in the soil.

Such is not the case with us. We want our shade trees without a mulch

WHAT TO DO IN AUGUST.

LAWNS: Mow the lawn often as this promotes stooling and root growth and the grass will then withstand heat better. Constant feeding is always necessary. Try some complete plant food followed by a two-hour soaking. Patch the bare spots as they appear with a handful of seed and the other handful of fertilizer.

PRUNING: Remove dead wood as fast as it appears. This may easily be detected at this time of the year while there is plenty of green foliage. The sooner this is removed the better for the plant. This is not only true in the case of trees and shrubs but equally true of all other plants.

BUGS: Declare war on bugs. Use pyrethrum or arsenical sprays on the bugs that chew the leaves. Use nicotine sulphate or pyrethrum on the bugs that suck the juices from the plants. If any mildews or blights appear spray them with boro mixture, or in the case of roses, use Massey Dust.

or leaves around them. We also want grass to grow under them and nearby, and in a great many cases, we also want shrubs, flowers and hedges to grow either under the trees or very close to them. This means that the tree must wage a constant war against these flowers and shrubs in order to have sufficient food and water for its natural, steady growth.

Fertilization of Shade Trees.

There are several methods of feeding trees. One of the common methods is to dig a trench under the extremities of the branch spread. This is not to be recommended, however, for it will destroy a great many of the fine, feeding roots. Another method is to distribute the fertilizer on the top of the soil in the hope that it will gradually feed the tree. This is not so good, because the grass there will probably use most of the plant food before the tree is able to get it. Also, a great many of the feeding roots of the tree will be attracted to the surface of the soil, which is not good for it.

Probably the best method of feeding trees is by placing the fertilizer in small, crowbar holes, just beyond the branch spread of the tree and completely surrounding the center of the tree. Holes should be made by the use of a crowbar, about 18 inches deep. These should be from two to three feet apart. A second circle of holes should be bored midway between the outer circle and the trunk, but not nearer than six feet to the trunk. These holes should then be filled with fertilizer up to within three or four inches of the surface of the soil, and then the soil replaced.

Many gardeners recommend stable manure for trees. It makes a good humus and greatly improves the physical and mechanical condition of any soil, but it does not feed the tree properly, particularly if it is broadcast on the surface. Liquified barnyard or cow manure is excellent for newly planted or transplanted stock.

When shade trees have been properly fed, it is not necessary to feed them every year unless exceptional conditions prevail. Every two to three years after the first application should be often enough for refeeding, to keep the trees healthy and vigorous. A casual observation of the color of the leaves will show when trees need feeding again. Undernourishing is generally shown by yellowish or brown, undersized leaves, thinness of foliage, and occasional dying back of the tips of the branches.

Properly fed trees will show almost immediately, the effect of these feedings. The foliage will be a deeper green and the size and volume of the foliage will be apparent. The development of healthy, vigorous trees tends to check insect borers, and there is less likelihood of limbs breaking during storms.

There are a number of commercial, complete plant foods that are recommended for the use of shade trees. Care should be taken in the selection of one of these, since a very slow acting fertilizer will give best results for this particular purpose. It would be almost impossible to make a mistake in using too much bone meal for fertilizing shade trees. For best results, we believe that raw bone meal is much to be preferred over the steamed bone meal. A good mixture is equal parts of sheep manure, bone meal and 12-4-4.

During hot, dry summers the ground around trees, particularly immediately under the branch spread, should be soaked with water occasionally. The superficial sprinkling commonly given to lawns does not benefit the trees, as this moisture is generally absorbed by the grass roots, and seldom penetrates deep enough to give the tree any beneficial results. Where trees are obviously lacking water, some more drastic method must be followed than the ordinary sprinkling. A good method is to bore a number of holes with an auger or crowbar, exactly in the fashion recommended for fertilization. The garden hose, or water from a bucket, may then be used in these holes until the ground is thoroughly puddled. These holes also serve to aerate the soil, a form of cultivation that is very beneficial. Trees that

WHAT TO PLANT IN AUGUST.

VEGETABLE SEED: Plant a complete fall garden—string beans, butter beans, beets, carrots, cucumbers, garden peas, green tomatoes, cabbage, collard and lettuce seeds. Rutabagas and turnips may be planted.

VEGETABLE PLANTS: Set out cabbage, collard and tomato plants.

IRISH POTATOES: Plant them now—it will soon be too late.

PERENNIALS: Both flower and vegetable perennials may be planted. Do not forget herbs that are perennials and biennials, such as dill.

LAWNS: A few courageous souls are planting Bermuda grass seed now, although the more conservative gardeners say that it is too late.

FLOWER SEEDS: A few of the annuals such as zinnias, may still be planted. All of the perennials such as hollyhocks, daisies, poppies, candytuft, etc., may be planted during August for flowers next year.

Remember that this puddling should be done only in cases of emergencies. That is, this should be done only during periods of very prolonged drought, or in the case of the trees transplanted during one winter which should be watered every two to four weeks during the following summer.

A new implement for watering trees and large shrubs has recently been developed that is very efficient and easy to use. It is simply a long sharp-pointed hollow steel tube that can be attached to the hose. This is forced into the ground to a depth of about three feet. In order to force it into the ground it is necessary to have the water turned on. We recently saved the life of a large Magnolia tree by the use of one of these tools, and know that it is a practical one.

AFTER A MAN'S HEART. By Jean Randall. Macrae-Smith Co., Philadelphia. 240 pp. $2.

If you enjoyed the earlier books by Jean Randall, "In Lilac Time" and "Maid of Honor," you are sure to enjoy this new story, "After a Man's Heart." Jean Randall writes of love and romance, of youth and its problems, and this is true of the new book, for it is as fine a love story as anyone could hope to find.

Action in this romance is in the reverse, the girl loves the boy, but the boy believes himself to be in love with another girl and one who proves to be unworthy of his love. The boy, Tim Clegg, is of the likable but dumb type, slow to realize the true love in his life. Buff Carroll, the girl, is one of those self-reliant and quick to grasp the situation types, one who likes to take care of some one in trouble, and this she does in a big way for Tim, saving him from a scheme in which he would be disgraced.

Questions, Answers On Garden Subjects

By MRS. FLETCHER PEARSON CROWN

Question: I have some crepe myrtles and dogwood trees that I would like to move now, what do you think of it?

Answer: If they were my own and not too big, I would move them, knowing, however, that this is not the best time of year for this work, I would prune much of the new growth off and would keep them mulched and watered should the weather turn dry. But I do not recommend this as the time to transplant shrubs or trees, although it can be done.

Question: Is it too late to plant columbine seed?

Answer: No. The fresh seed should now be available and will germinate so readily. But I would not delay. You can begin making plans for planting pansies, also. But get the best and freshest seed if you wish to succeed. Plant zinnias once more. Keep your dahlias worked, watered and fertilized and they will bloom until frost. Keep grass cut, fertilized and watered and if needed, plant a few seed wherever the grass is thin.

Remember to cut your petunia plants to keep them blooming. Keep seed pods off torenia, marigold, zinnia. Spray the mildew on zinnia foliage with 1 tablespoonful of soda in one gallon of water, also the dahlia foliage. Cut back all perennials that have finished blooming, they will look neater and make stronger plants for another year.

Now is an excellent time to divide and reset iris. Try to keep a group of each kind, together, rather than planting in a haphazard jumble. Try rooting roses at this time, half ripened wood. Do not neglect your roses, for after so much rain they probably need spraying more than ever. Also fertilizing and working. It is a grand temptation to let down, but it won't be long before you would regret it and find yourself way behind.

Little Known Facts About Well Known People--

John Law—He Made Thousands of Millionaires And Died With Holes in His Shoes

By DALE CARNEGIE.

This is another in a series of features by the author of "How to Win Friends and Influence People."

Two hundred years ago, a foreigner in France, a Scotsman called "Handsome John" Law, came to Paris friendless and unknown, and made himself financial dictator of France and the most powerful man in Europe. Twelve years later, he fled in disgrace with an infuriated mob howling for his blood and longing to tear him limb from limb.

The doings of this handsome Scotsman—half Casanova and half John Stuart Mill—constitute one of the most bizarre and spectacular tales in all the annals of adventure. His wild cat schemes made beggars of half a nation and his fantastic Mississippi bubble has gone down into history as a byword for financial folly.

At the age of 12, John Law was precocious and brilliant mathematician who astonished the professors of Edinburgh. At 17, he was a dandy and a fop, pinching snuff with a graceful flourish and strutting about in a curled wig and a rose-colored silk coat, ruffled with lace.

At 20, he was a notorious gambler, addicted to the shuffle of cards and the rattle of dice. At 26, he fell in love with an old man's darling, and the old man, consumed with jealous rage, challenged the young Scotsman to a duel. They fought in a thick London fog and John Law killed his adversary with a sword.

Law was arrested, tried for murder, and sentenced to be hanged by the neck till dead. But two days before he was to mount the gallows, he drugged his guards, slipped out of his chains, scaled the prison walls, and escaped to France.

These were terrible times. French mobs, driven to desperation by hate and hunger, boiled through the streets of Paris, smashing statues of their dead king, Louis XIV, and demanding that the new government do something at once to save the country from starvation and disaster.

And presto! John Law appeared with his glib tongue and his radical ideas. He persuaded the government to print a little paper money. Prices rose. Business hummed. Happy days were there again and "Handsome John" Law was regarded as a miracle man. So he started doing a bit of promoting. He organized a great monopoly, an industrial octopus which had the exclusive rights to trade with China, India, the south seas, Canada, and all the French colonies in America.

John Law ballyhooed his new project in glamorous terms. Louisiana was a modern Eldorado, rich with gold and sparkling with emeralds. With a lordly touch of magnificence, John Law guaranteed to pay dividends of 120 per cent a year on his project. Prices leaped and skyrocketed, and the public went mad.

Dukes and dishwashers, counts and cut-throats, all fought with one another in a desperate effort to get inside Law's house and buy more stock. The jam was so terrible, the impact so terrific, that people were crushed to death in the hysterical mob.

The government kept the printing presses busy turning out more money, and John Law kept issuing more stock. The boom swept over France like a tornado. Everybody was getting rich. Servants and stable boys speculated in the stocks and woke up in the morning to find themselves millionaires.

A duchess, going to the opera, was astounded to discover that the box next to hers was occupied by her former cook, now bedecked with glittering diamonds.

The streets of Paris resembled a mardi gras. Sideshows and refreshment booths crowded the highways; roulette wheels whirled and clicked, and pickpockets from the gutters of Europe fattened on the infatuated mobs.

The population of Paris increased by 300,000. Inns and lodgings were stuffed like barracks. Thrifty housewives earned tidy fortunes making up beds in their attics and kitchens—even in their stables. The streets were so jammed with vehicles that a foot-pace was the speed limit. Prices soared and wages went rocketing after them. Factories hummed night and day—villas were being built everywhere, and all la belle France was riding towards Bagdad in a gilded coach.

Then came the first, faint rumble of impending disaster. The powerful Prince of Conti, in a moment of anger, filled three wagons with paper money, and driving to the bank, spitefully demanded gold. Another man put his fortune into a farmer's cart, covered it with hay, and then, disguised as a peasant, in wooden shoes, drove his load of francs and fodder over the border into Belgium.

The Mississippi bubble burst. Confidence was gone—gone as quickly and dramatically as it had come. The bank stopped payment. John Law was dismissed in disgrace and France was gripped by a panic. The crowd that had once elbowed and gouged one another in a frantic scramble to buy stock, now tramped 14 people to death in a mad effort to get its money back.

The infuriated mob hurled stones through the windows of Law's house and threatened to batter the life out of him.

Law, trembling in terror, fled from France leaving all his treasures behind. His gorgeous estates, worth millions of dollars, were confiscated. His books and furniture and silverware were sold. His wife and daughters became paupers. And nine years later, "Handsome John" Law, the man who had once been mightier and richer than kings, died in Venice, without friends and without money. There were holes in the bottom of his worn shoes, and he was too poor to buy a little bundle of wood to heat the miserable room in which he lay dying.

Jewelry and Gimcracks

By Carolyn Crew

NOTED WRITER AND FASHION AUTHORITY

Three new-fashioned cuff bracelets, like your Grandma's.

CAPTAIN KIDD'S treasure chest, or maybe it is the Count of Monte Cristo's—seems to be appearing piecemeal on town belles and jewelry counters. A very pleasant way to go slightly crazy is to make the rounds for to see and admire.

Massive chunks of "jewel"; slave bracelets, cinnebar gadgets, pigeon-size cabochons for wrist, neck, ears, fingers; delicate "heirlooms"; the Hungarian notion of small jewels, gold filigree and white enamel, cameos, severely set spindles of many carats, looking like sapphires, emeralds, diamonds; rhinestones set in patterns originally designed for precious stones, and very, very deceitful. That's the story.

The three bracelets shown here today are silver finish, and the one directly above glistens with marcasite settings. They frankly follow Victorian designs. The impudent choker which embellishes the sweater neck, right, spells a message in semaphore. The South Sea styles fathoms of coral bead strands.

Four-strand multi-color "jewell" bracelet—stones simulate tourmalines.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 14,

BIRTHDAY—Miss Florence Martus, Savannah's world-famed "waving girl," right, is shown receiving gifts on her 70th birthday from Mrs. J. Roger Cohan, president of the Woman's Organization for the Advancement of the American Merchant Marine. Below, a portion of the large crowd which gathered in historic Fort Pulaski, in the Savannah harbor, where the ceremonies took place. Miss Martus waved day or night at every ship going into or out of the port for 44 years. (Rogers)

DEATH BOLT—Three persons were killed and 15 injured as lightning struck a beach No. 14 at Jacob Riis Park, Rockaway, N.Y. Emergency squads and victims are shown.

(Right)
BRIDE—Mrs. Hardy A. Sullivan, the former Miss Julia Ragin, whose marriage was solemnized recently at the home of her mother, Mrs. Asa G. Candler.

GOVERNOR RIVERS' "BOOK" SHOWS HIM FULFILLING EVERY PROMISE

IN THIS SPECIALLY posed picture Governor E. D. Rivers presents his giant "Book of Official Records" to the people of Georgia, saying "The only issue in this campaign is whether Ed Rivers is carrying out the program you sent him there to put into effect, and whether you want your job completed." This great "Book" shows the progress that has been made on each pledge he made in his campaign for election in 1936.

Rivers Takes Official Record
To People.

The Governor states that, since all the people cannot get up to the capitol to go over the state's books personally, he is bringing them to the people in this giant "Book of Official Records."

The Constitution, knowing that many of its readers will be unable to attend meetings and see the "Book," gives this pictorial presentation of its contents, and preserves for posterity this innovation in political campaigning.

AT GRIFFIN crowds braved pouring rain to hear Governor Rivers and to see the mammoth book recording the progress of the program he was elected to carry out. The book can be seen in the distance on the truck to the right of the speaking platform.

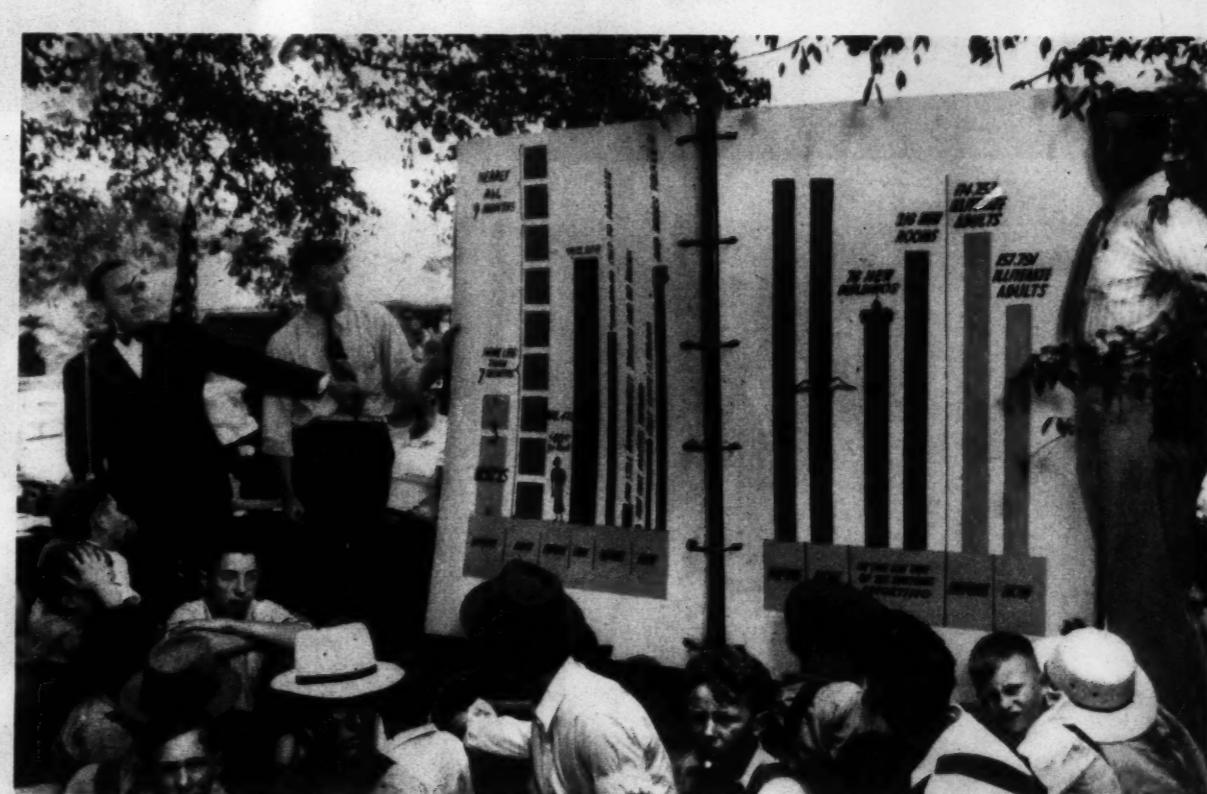

AT CORDELE Governor Rivers opens the book pointing out (left-hand page) that this is the people's program, since they nominated and elected him on the planks of this platform, or program. Right-hand page of "Book" shows carrying out of first pledge of the program.

CROWDS SURROUND GOVERNOR RIVERS at every meeting, pledging support and urging him on in completing their program.

(Right)

(Left)
THESE PAGES show increase of school terms in all the state from three to seven and nine months, increased salaries and full payment of them to teachers. Free school books to all children and what they have meant in putting more children in school and saving money for the parents is shown along with the rise in Georgia's educational standards, new school construction, and remarkable decrease in illiteracy through adult education.

PLEDGE NO. 3 has been carried out (left-hand page) with rule by the laws of the state instead of the bayonet. Right-hand page pictures fourth pledge in the program with actual statistics to be shown on two following pages.

AT LAVONIA several thousand north Georgians rivet attention on the "book" while Governor Rivers shows the progress that has been made in this program that the people again ratified as constitutional amendments a little over a year ago.

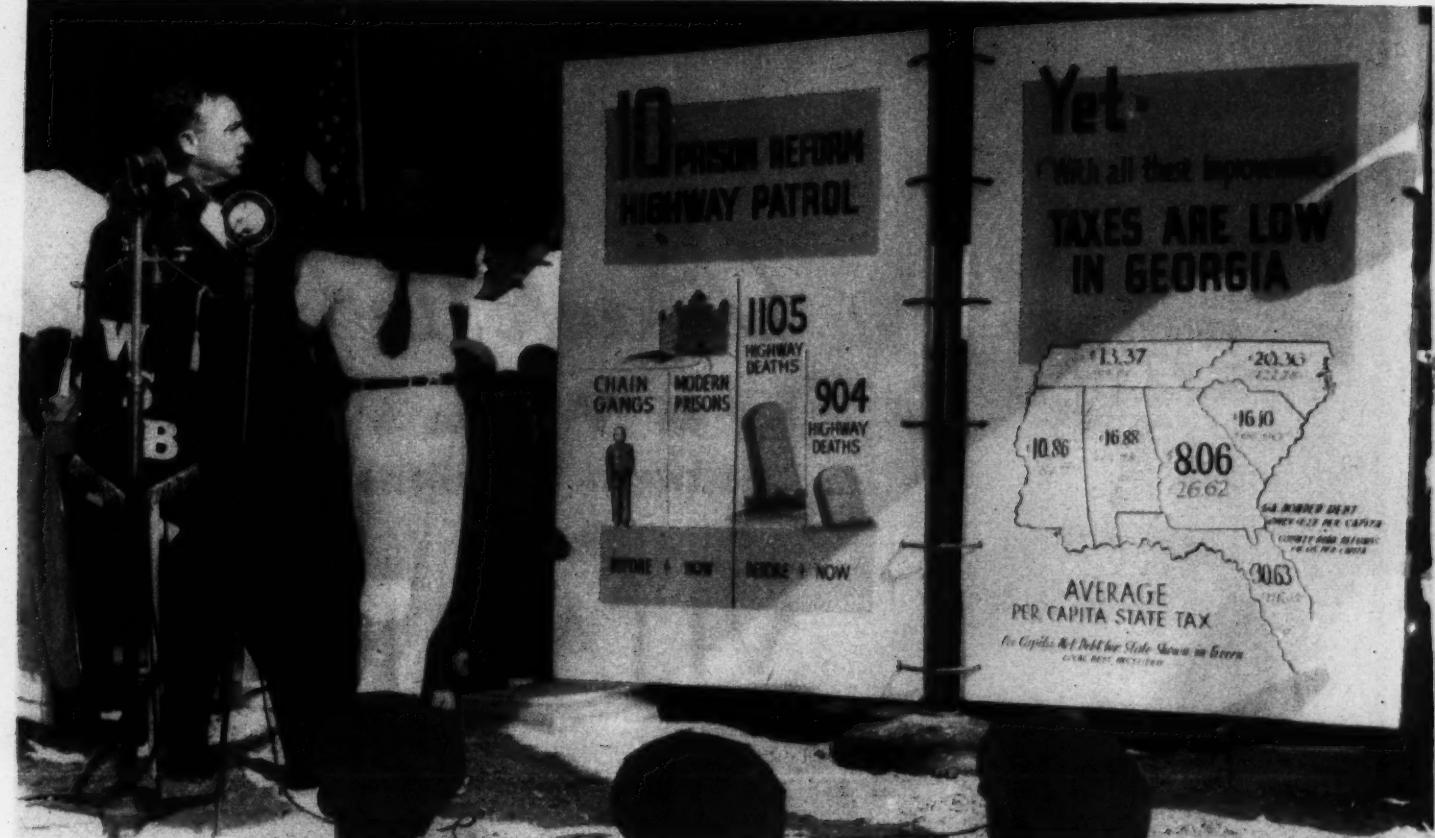

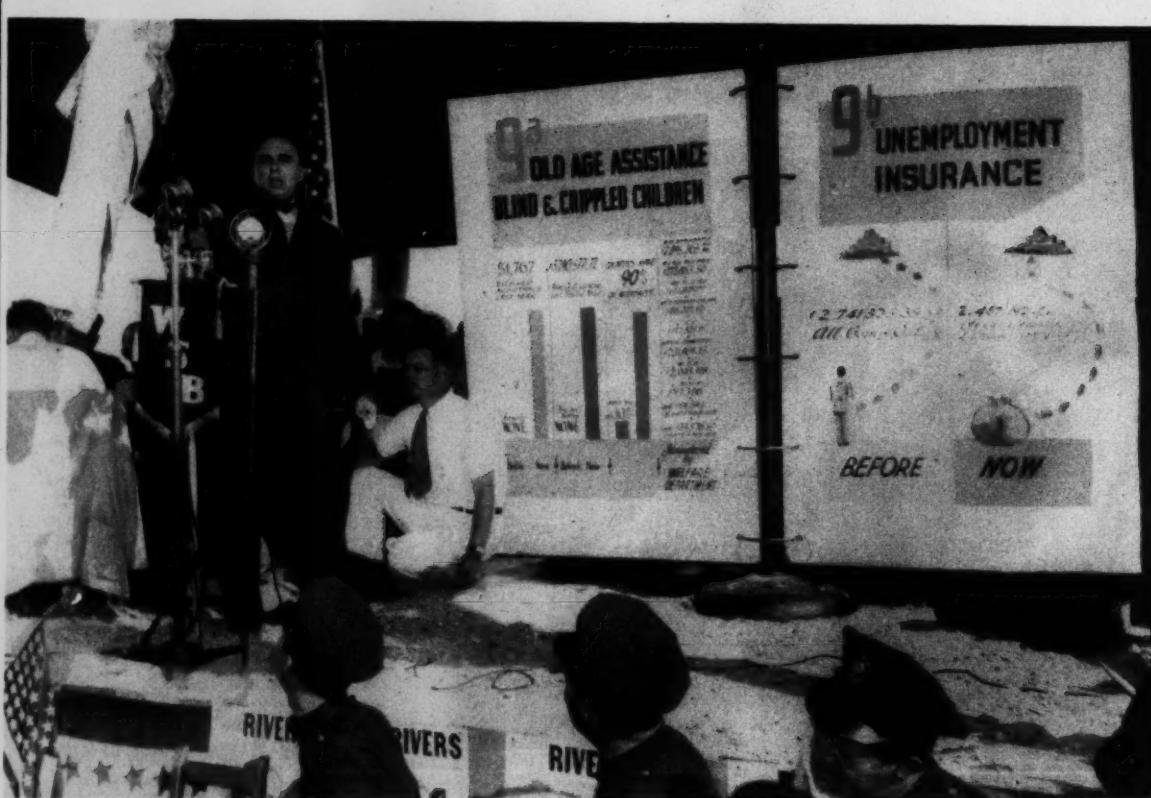

A HAPPY COUPLE—Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Oliver, of Lavonia, gratefully smile in the knowledge that their seven fine children are now being educated and given free school books, thanks to the success of the people's program, under Governor Rivers' administration.

CROWDS OVER STATE CHEER SHOWING OF "BOOK OF OFFICIAL RECORDS"

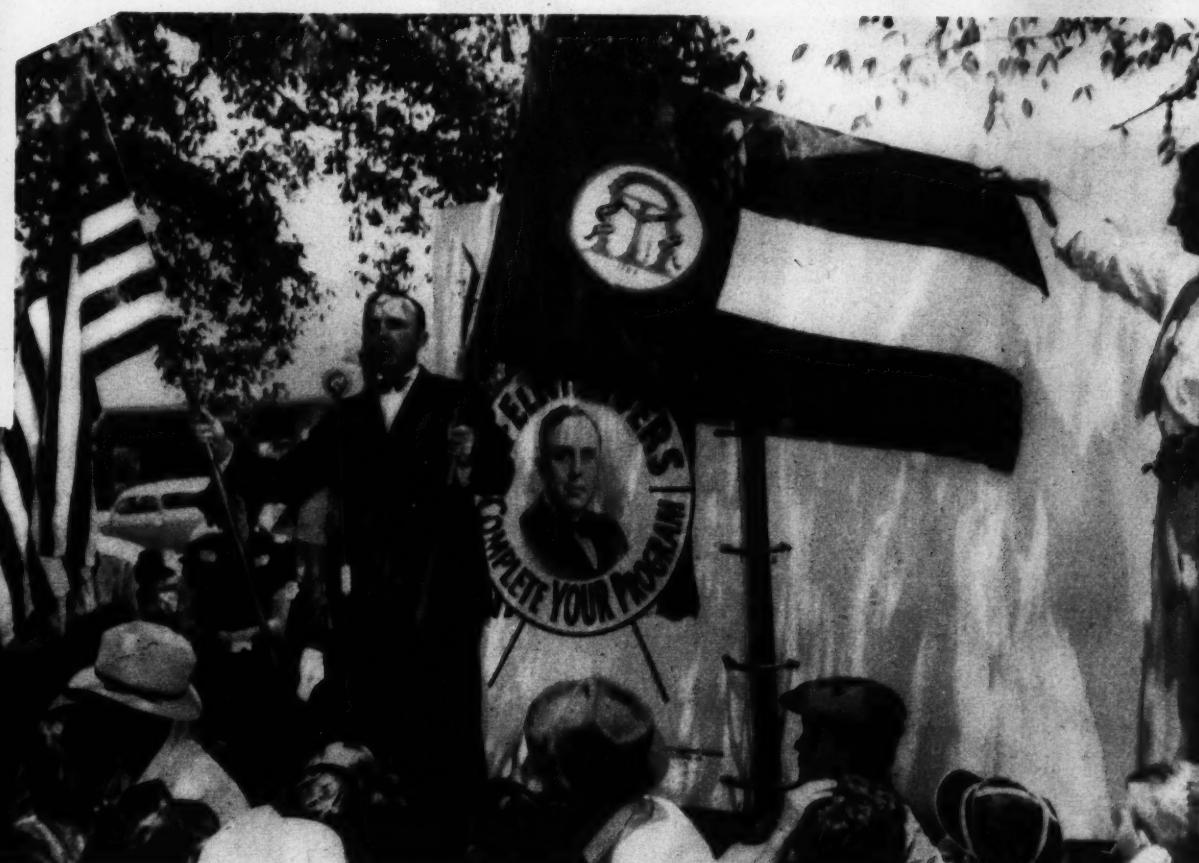

(Left) NO MORE LITTLE HOMES and household furniture will be sold for taxes under the new exemptions, Governor Rivers points out as redeeming pledge No. 5. Turning to the 6th pledge (right hand page) the Governor shows how millions in federal money that was being lost through lack of state co-operation is now being brought in and used in building new highways and bridges.

(Right) UNDER PLEDGE NO. 7 Governor Rivers explains operation of department of labor which has successfully arbitrated every labor difference without calling out militia a single time, and cites progress in Red Cross, rural electrification, farm markets, soil conservation and other improvements. Fulfilling Pledge No. 8 in the health program has decreased deaths from disease and has improved health standards of the people and increased the health appropriation from $125,000 to $600,000.

OLD AGE PENSIONS, aid to dependent, crippled children and the blind now being paid to over 51,787 people and nearly $3,000,000 a month being administered by the Welfare Department demonstrate strides being made in pledge No. 9. Also under pledge 9 is shown (on the right hand page) where over $2,000,000 paid to the federal government, when we had no unemployment insurance law, has been recovered for the people of Georgia.

THE TENTH PLEDGE, for prison reform and a highway patrol, is an accomplished fact in completing the record. Yet with the enormously improved services the state now provides for its people, the per capita tax rate for state purposes is by far the lowest in the southern states, and Georgia's per capita state and local debt is the lowest in the entire United States.

GRATEFUL FOR GOVERNOR RIVERS' help to the old people of the state, 96-year-old Mrs. Annie Smith presents him with a hand-made quilt, saying "Every stitch was made with a prayer for you in completing the people's program."

(Left) THE PAGES OF THE BOOK have shown that Governor Rivers is fulfilling every pledge made to the people, and as the last page is turned, Old Glory and the flag of Georgia are raised high in Governor Rivers' hands as he voices the battle-cry of the people, "Re-elect Governor Rivers! Complete Your Program!"

WINS FORTUNE—The steady nerve and physical prowess of J. Smith Ferebee, Chicago broker, won him more than $30,000 in one day as he played 144 holes in 15 hours and seven minutes for a half share in a Virginia estate. He owned half and staked it against the remaining share and won.

August or December
it's Always Creamy

THAT'S WHY SNOWDRIFT IS SO EASY TO USE

Snowdrift has the same "constant-creaminess" whether the weather is freezing or sweltering. Other shortenings vary with the temperature. So your success with other shortenings will vary, too. What a difference with Snowdrift! Always the same creamy consistency! Snowdrift doesn't harden in the ice box or get soft in the hot kitchen.

This is no accident. We make Snowdrift so that it comes to you—and stays—at just the right creaminess to make it easy to use at all times.

FOR CAKES—"Constant-Creaminess" makes Snowdrift work evenly and minutely through your cake batter—giving you light, fine-grained cakes, with full, even volume.

FOR BISCUITS—Snowdrift's "constant-creaminess" works into your biscuit dough quickly and thoroughly every time. So, every time, your biscuits melt in the mouth—and melt a man's heart.

AND PIE CRUST is flaky and tender—with Snowdrift to your aid! Always creamy, Snowdrift always cuts in evenly and quickly.

BEST NEWS OF ALL! All the cakes and pies your family love best are made digestible—with Snowdrift. For Snowdrift is fresh and pure—made from wholesome vegetable oil—and nothing else. Ask your grocer for Snowdrift today—in the economical three or six-pound air-tight can.
